

EIKON

BASILIKI

£ 4

Madan 25

See 116 36

Eikon Basilan
350

Walter Cradock:

Memorandum That octob. ye 25th 1686 at the Black swan behind St Pauls Church began the sale of the Books of the person of Quality [whose name is subscribed to this following Remarks] by Edward Millington, who when he came to sell one of those Books, there was found this Remarks writton & subscribed by the said persons own hand.

King Charls the Second & the Duke of York did both in the last Session of Parlimont 1675 [when I showed them in the Lords House the writton Coppy of this Book wherein are some Corrections & Alterations written with the late K. Charls the Firsts own hand] assure me that this was none of the said Kings Compiling, but made by Dr Gaudon Bp of Exeter, which I here insert for the undecoiving of others in this point by attesting so much under my hand

Anglorey.

Charles by the grace of God Kinge of England, Scotland France and Ireland, defendor of the faith, etc:

'ΕΙΚΩΝ ΒΑΣΙΛΙΚΗ.
THE POURTRAITURE
OF
HIS SACRED
MAJESTIE
IN HIS SOLITUDES
AND SUFFERINGS:

Together with his Private Prayers used in the time of his restraint, and delivered to Dr. JUXON, Bishop of London, immediately before his death.

ROM. 8.

More then Conquerour, &c.

Bona agere, & mala pati, Regium est.

MDCXLIX.

TReshaut, trespuissant & tresexcellent
Prince CHARLES, par la grace de Dieu Roy de la grand' Bretaigne, France, & D' Irlande, Defenseur de la foy, &c.

EXcellentissimus, metuendissimus & potentissimus Princeps, CAROLUS, Dei gratia Rex Angliæ, Scotiæ, Franciæ, & Hiberniæ, Fidei Defensor, &c.

THe most high, most mighty, and most excellent Prince, CHARLES, by the grace of God King of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c.

THE CONTENTS.

1. pon His Majesties calling this last Parliament. pag. 1.
2. Upon the Earl of Straffords death. 5
3. Upon his Majesties going to the House of Commons. 11
4. Upon the Insolency of the Tumults. 15
5. Upon His Majesties passing the Bill for the Trienniall Parliaments : And after settling this, during the pleasure of the two Houses. 24
6. Upon his Majesties retirement from VVestminster. 31
7. Upon the Queens departure, and absence out of England. 38
8. Upon His Majesties repulse at Hull, and the fates of the Hothams. 43
9. Upon the Listing, and raising Armies against the King. 49 10. Upon their seizing the Kings Magazines, A 3

- zines, Forts, Navy, and Militia. 61*
11. Upon the 19. Propositions first sent to the King; and more afterwards. 69
12. Upon the Rebellion, and troubles in Ireland. 83
13. Upon the Calling in of the Scots, and their Coming. 93
14. Upon the Covenant. 102
15. Upon the many Jealousies raised, and Scandals cast upon the King, to stirre up the People against him. 114
16. Upon the Ordinance against the Common-Prayer-Book. 129
17. Of the differences between the King and the two Houses, in point of Church-government. 138
18. Upon Vxbridge-Treatie, and other offers made by the King. 156
19. Upon the various events of the Warre; Victories and Defeats. 162
20. Vpon the Reformations of the Times. 170
21. Vpon His Majesties Letters taken, and di-

divulged. 178

22. Vpon His Majesties leaving Oxford, and going to the Scots. 184

23. Vpon the Scots delivering the King to the English; and His Captivity at Holmeby. 188

24. Vpon their denying His Majesty the Attendance of His Chaplains. 193

25. Penitentiall Meditations and Vows in the KINGS solitude at Holmeby. 204

26. *Vpon the Armies Surprisall of the KING
at Holmeby, and the ensuing distractions in the two Houses, the Army, and
the City.* 209

27. To the Prince of VVales. 216

Meditations upon Death, after the Votes of Non-Addresses, and HIS MA-JESTIES closer imprisonment in Caris-brook. 235

A Prayer in time of Captivity. 253

Another Prayer. 254

A Prayer and Confession. 256

A Prayer in time of imminent danger. 257

A

A Copy of a Letter from the Prince.	259
His MAJESTIES Speech to the Lady Elizabeth.	260
The Lady Elizabeths relation.	261
An Epitaph.	263

The Explanation of the Frontispiece.

A Sacred heat inspires my Soul to trie
 If Pray'rs can give Me what the Warres denie,
 Three Crowns distinctly here in order do Present their objects to my knowing view, Earths Crown lies humbled at my foot, disdain,
 'Twas bright, but heavie, and withall but vain,
 And now by Grace a Crown of Thorns I greet,
 Sharp was this Crown, but not so sharp as sweet:
 This was Christs crown, my book upon my bord Explains my heart, My hope is in thy Word.
 My Starrie Crown of Glorie, last I see,
 As full of Blisse, as of Eternitie.
 Now look behind, and midst most troubled skies
 Behold, how clearer I from darknesse rise,
 And stand unmov'd triumphant, like a Rock,
 'Gainst all the waves, & winds tempestuous shock
 So like the Palm, which heaviest weights do trie, Virtue opprest, doth grow more straight and high.

The Explanation of the EMBLEME .

Insuperbus genus omne mali, probrisq; gravatus,
Lixq; ferenda ferens, Palma ut Depressa, resurgo.

Ac, velut undarum Fluctus Ventiq; , furorem Irati Populi Rupes immota repello .

Clarior e tenebris, coelestis stella, corusco.
Victor et æternum-felici pace triumpho .

Auro Fulgentem rutilo gemmisq; micantem,
At curis Gravidam spernendo calco Coronam.

Spinosam, at ferri facilem, quo Spes mea, Christi
Auxilio, Nobis non est tractare molestum .

Æternam, fixis fidei, semperq; -beatam
In Cælos oculis Specto, Nobisq; paratam .

Quod Vanum est, sperno; quod Christi Gratia præbet Amphæli stultum est: Virtutis Gloria merces .

Though clogg'd with weights of miseries
Palm-like Depress'd, I higher rise .

And as th' unmoved Rock out-brave's
The boistrous Windes and raging waves:
So triumph I. And shine more bright
In sad Affliction's Darksom night .

That Splendid, but yet toilsom Crown
Regardlessly I trample down .

With joie I take this Crown of thorn,
Though sharp, yet easie to be born .

That heav'nlie Crown, already mine,
I view with eies of Faith divine .

I slight vain things; and do embrace Glorie, the just reward of Grace .

G. D.

Τὸ Χρὶ ἐδὲν ἠδίκησε τὴν πόλιν, ἐδὲ τὸ Κάτωπα .

~~As the the sun, which heavie weights doth~~
Virtue opprest, doth grow more straight and high.

'ΕΙΚΩΝ ΒΑΣΙΛΙΚΗ.

I. Upon His Majesties calling this last Parliament.

His last Parliament I called, not more by others advise, and necessity of My affairs, then by My own choice and inclination; who have alwayes thought the right way of Parliaments most safe for My Crown, and best pleasing to My People : And although I was not forgetfull of those sparks, which some mens distempers formerly studied to kindle in Parliaments, (which by forbearing to convene for some years, I hoped to have extinguished) yet resolving with My self to give all just satisfaction to modest and sober desires, and to redresse all publick grievances in Church and State; I hoped (by My freedome and their moderation) to prevent all misunderstandings, and miscarriages in this : In which as I feared affairs would meet with some passion and prejudice in other men, so I resolved they should find least of them in My self, not doubting, but by the

B weight

- weight of reason I should counterpoize the overbalancings of any factions.

I was indeed sorry to hear, with what partiality and popular heat Elections were carried in many
 - places; yet hoping that the gravity and discretion of other Gentlemen, would allay and fix the
 - Commons to a due temperament, (guiding some
 - mens wel-meaning zeal by such rules of moderation, as are best both to preserve and restore the health of all States and Kingdoms) no man was better pleased with the convening of this Parliament, then My self; who knowing best the largesse of mine own Heart toward My peoples good and just contentment, pleased My self most in that good and firm understanding, which would hence grow between Me and My people.

All jealousies being laid aside, My own and
 - My Childrens interests gave Me many obligations to seek and preserve the love and welfare of My Subjects. The onely temporall blessing that is left to the ambition of just Monarchs, as their greatest honour and safety, next Gods protection;
 - I cared not to lessen My self in some things of My wonted Prerogative, since I knew I could be no loser, if I might gain but a recompence in My Subjects affections.

I intended not onely to oblige My friends, but Mine enemies also: exceeding even the desires of those that were factiously discontented, if they did
 - but pretend to any modest and sober sense. The

The odium and offences which some mens rigour or remissnes in Church, and State, had contracted upon My Government, I resolved to have expiated by such Laws and regulations for the future, as might not onely rectifie what was amisse in practise, but supply what was defective in the constitution: No man having a greater zeal to see Religion settled, & preserved in Truth, Unity, and Order, then My self, whom it most concerns both in piety, and policy; as knowing, that, No flames of civil dissentions are more dangerous, then those which make Religious pretensions the grounds of FaCTIONS.

I resolved to reform what I should by free and full advice in Parliament be convinced to be amisse; and to grant whatever my Reason and Conscience told Me was fit to be desired; I wish I had kept My self within these bounds, and not suffered My own Judgement to have been overborn in some things, more by others importunities, then their arguments; My confidence had lesse betrayed My self and My Kingdomes, to those advantages which some men sought for, who wanted nothing but power and occasion to do mischief.

But our sinnes being ripe, there was no preventing of Gods Justice, from reaping that glory in our Calamities, which we robb'd him of in our Prosperity.

For thou (O Lord) hast made us see, that Resolutions of future Reforming, do not alwayes satisfie thy Justice, nor prevent thy Vengeance for former miscarriages.

- Our sinnes have overlaid our hopes ; Thou hast taught us to depend on thy mercies to forgive, not on our purpose to amend.

When thou hast vindicated thy glory by thy judgements, and hast shewed us how unsafe it is to offend thee, upon presumptions afterwards to please thee ; Then I trust thy mercies will restore those blessings to us which we have so much abused, as to force thee to deprive us of them.

For want of timely repentance of our sinnes, Thou givest us cause to repent of those Remedies we too late apply.

Yet I do not repent of My calling this last Parliament; because, O Lord, I did it with an upright intention, to Thy glory, and My peoples good.

The miseries which have ensued upon Me and My Kingdoms, are the just effects of thy displeasure upon us; and may be yet (through thy mercy) preparatives of us to
- future blessings, and better hearts to enjoy them.

- O Lord, though thou hast deprived us of many former comforts, yet grant Me and My people the benefit of our afflictions, and thy chastisements, that thy rod as well as thy staff may comfort us : Then shall we dare to account them the strokes not of an Enemy, but a Father : When
- thou givest us those humble affections, that measure of patience in repentance, which becomes thy children; I shall have no cause to repent the miseries this Parliament hath occasi-

occasioned, when by them thou hast brought Me and My People, unfeignedly to repent of the sinnes we have committed.

Thy Grace is infinitely better with our sufferings, then our Peace could be with our sinnes.

O thou Sovereigne Goodnesse and Wisdome, who over-rulest all our Counsels, over-rule also all our hearts; That the worse things we suffer by thy Justice, the better we may be by thy Mercy.

As our sinnes have turned our Antidotes into Poyson, so let thy Grace turn our Poysons into Antidotes.

As the sins of our Peace disposed us to this unhappy War, so let this War prepare us for thy blessed Peace.

That although I have but troublesome Kingdoms here, yet I may attain to that Kingdom of Peace in My heart, and in thy Heaven, which Christ hath purchased, and thou wilt give to thy Servant (though a sinner) for my Saviours sake, Amen.

2. Upon the Earl of Straffords death.

I Looked upon my Lord of Strafford, as a Gentleman, whose great abilities might make a Prince rather afraid, then ashamed to employ him, in the greatest affairs of State.

For those were prone to create in him great confidence of undertakings, and this was like enough to betray him to great errours, and many enemies: Whereof he could not but contract

- good store, while moving in so high a sphere,
- and with so vigorous a lustre, he must needs (as
- the Sun) raise many envious exhalations, which
- condensed by a popular odium, were capable to
- cast a cloud upon the brightest merit and integrity.

Though I cannot in my judgement approve all he did, driven (it may be) by the necessities of times, and the temper of that people, more then

- led by his own disposition to any heighth and rigour of actions: yet I could never be convinced
- of any such criminousnesse in him, as willingly to expose his life to the stroke of Justice, and malice of his enemies.

I never met with a more unhappy conjuncture of affairs, then in the businesse of that unfortunate Earl: when between my own unsatisfiednesse in Conscience, and a necessity (as some told me) of satisfying the importunities of some people; I was perswaded by those, that I think wished me well, to choose rather what was safe, then what seemed just; preferring the outward peace of my Kingdoms with men, before that inward exactnesse of Conscience before God.

And indeed I am so farre from excusing or denying that compliance on My part (for plenary

- consent it was not) to his destruction, whom in my Judgement I thought not, by any clear
- Law, guilty of death: That I never bare any touch

of

of Conscience with greater regret: which as a signe of my repentance, I have often with sorrow confessed both to God and men, as an act of so sinfull frailty, that it discovered more a fear of Man, then of God; whose name and place on earth no man is worthy to bear, who will avoid inconveniences of State, by acts of so high injustice, as no publick convenience can expiate or compensate.

I see it a bad exchange to wound a mans own Conscience, thereby to salve State sores; to calm the storms of popular discontents, by stirring up a tempest in a mans own bosome.

Nor hath Gods Justice failed in the event and sad consequences, to shew the world the fallacy of that Maxime, Better one man perish, (though unjustly) then the people be displeased, or destroyed. For,

In all likelyhood, I could never have suffered, with my People, greater calamities, (yet with greater comfort) had I vindicated Straffords innocence, at least by denying to signe that destructive BILL, according to that Justice, which My Conscience suggested to Me, then I have done since I gratified some mens unthankfull importunities with so cruell a favour. And I have observed, that those, who counselled Me to signe that Bill, have been so farre from receiving the rewards of such ingratiatings with the people, that no men have been harassed and crushed more then they: He only hath been least vexed by them, who counselled me not to consent against the vote of My own Conscience; I hope God hath forgiven Me and them, the sinfull rashnesse of that businesse.

To which being in My soul so fully conscious, those Judgements God hath pleased to send upon Me, are so much the more wel-come, as a means (I hope) which his mercy hath sanctified so to Me, as to make Me repent of that unjust Act, (for so it was to Me) and for the future to teach Me, That the best rule of policy is to preferre the doing of Justice, before all enjoyments; and the peace of my Conscience before the preservation of My Kingdoms.

Nor hath any thing more fortified My resolutions against all those violent importunities, which since have sought to gain a like consent from Me to Acts, wherein my Conscience is unsatisfied, then the sharp touches I have had for what passed Me, in My Lord of Straffords busines.

Not that I resolved to have employed him in my affairs against the advise of my Parliament, but I would not have had any hand in his death, of whose guiltlesnesse I was better assured, then any man living could be.

Nor were the Crimes objected against him so clear, as after a long and fair hearing to give convincing satisfaction to the Major part of both Houses; especially that of the Lords, of whom scarce

scarce a third part were present, when the Bill passed that House: And for the House of Commons, many Gentlemen, disposed enough to diminish My Lord of Straffords greatnesse and power, yet unsatisfied of his guilt in Law, durst not condemn him to die: who for their integrity in their Votes, were by Posting their Names, exposed to the popular calumny, hatred and fury, which grew then so exorbitant in their clamours for justice, (that is, to have both My self and the two Houses Vote, and do as they would have us) that many ('tis thought) were rather terrified to concurre with the condemning party, then satisfied that of right they ought so to do.

And that after Act vacating the Authority of the precedent, for future imitation, sufficiently tells the world, that some remorse touched even his most implacable enemies, as knowing he had very hard measure, and such as they would be very loth should be repeated to themselves.

This tenderesse and regret I find in my soul, for having had any hand (and that very unwillingly God knows) in shedding one mans bloud unjustly, (though under the colour and formalities of Justice, and pretences of avoyding publick mischiefs) which may (I hope) be some evidence before God and Man, to all Posterity, that I am farre from bearing justly the vast load and guilt of all that bloud which hath been shed in this unhappy Warre; which some men will needs charge on Me, to ease their own souls; who am, and ever shall be, more afraid to take away any mans life unjustly, then to lose my own.
this

But thou, O God of infinite mercies, forgive me that act of sinfull compliance, which hath greater aggravations upon Me then any man. Since I had not the least temptation of envy, or malice against him, and by my place should, at least so farre, have been a preserver of him, as to have denied my consent to his destruction.

O Lord, I acknowledge my transgression, and my sinne is ever before me.

Deliver me from bloud-guiltinesse, O God, thou God of my salvation, and my tongue shall sing of thy righteousness.

Against thee have I sinned, and done this evil in thy sight; for thou sawest the contradiction between my heart and my hand.

Yet cast me not away from thy presence, purge me with the bloud of my Redeemer, and I shall be clean; wash me with that precious effusion, & I shall be whiter then snow.

Teach me to learn Righteousnesse by thy Judgements, and to see my frailty in thy justice: while I was perswaded by shedding one mans bloud to prevent after-troubles, thou hast for that, among other sins, brought upon me, and upon my Kingdoms, great, long, and heavy troubles.

Make me to preferre justice, which is thy will, before all contrary clamours, which are but the discoveries of mans injurious will.

It

It is too much that they have once overcome me, to please them by displeasing thee: O never suffer me for any reason of State, to go against my Reason of Conscience, which is highly to sinne against thee, the God of Reason, and Iudge of our Consciences.

What ever O Lord, thou see'st fit to deprive me of, yet restore unto me the joy of thy Salvation, and ever uphold me with thy free Spirit, which subjects my will to none, but thy light of Reason, Iustice, and Religion, which shines in my Soul: for Thou desirest Truth in the inward parts, and integrity in the outward expressions.

Lord hear the voice of thy Sons, and my Saviours Bloud, which speaks better things. O make me, and my People, to hear the voice of Ioy and Gladnesse, that the bones which thou hast broken, may rejoyce in thy salvation.

3. Upon his Majesties going to the House of Commons.

MY going to the House of Commons to demand Justice upon the five Members, was an act, which My enemies loded with all the obloquies and exasperations they could.

It filled indifferent men with great jealousies and fears; yea, and many of My friends resented it as a motion rising rather from Passion then Reason, and not guided with such discretion, as the touchinesse of those times required.

But

But these men knew not the just motives, and pregnant grounds, with which I thought My self so furnished, that there needed nothing to such evidence, as I could have produced against those I charged, save onely a free and legal Triall, which was all I desired.

Nor had I any temptation of displeasure, or revenge against those mens persons, further then I had discovered those (as I thought) unlawfull correspondencies they had used, & engagements they had made, to embroil My Kingdoms: of all which I missed but little to have produced writings under some mens own hands, who were the chief contrivers of the following Innovations.

Providence would not have it so, yet I wanted not such probabilities as were sufficient to raise jealousies in any Kings heart, who is not wholly stupid and neglective of the publick peace, which to preserve by calling in question half a dozen men, in a fair and legall way (which God knows was all my designe) could have amounted to no worse effect, had it succeeded, then either to do Me, and My Kingdome right, in case they had been found guilty; or else to have cleared their Innocency, and removed My suspicions; which as they were not raised out of any malice, so neither were they in reason to be smothered.

What flames of discontent this spark (though I sought by all speedy and possible means to quench quench it) soon kindled, all the world is witnes: The aspersions which some men cast upon that action, as if I had designed by force to assault the House of Commons, and invade their privilege, is so false, that as God best knows, I had no such intent; so none that attended Me could justly gather from any thing I then said, or did, the least intimation of any such thoughts.

That I went attended with some Gentlemen, as it was no unwonted thing for the Majesty and safety of a King so to be attended, especially in discontented times; so were my followers at that time short of My ordinary Guard, and no way proportionable to hazard a tumultuary conflict. Nor were they more scared at my coming, then I was unassured of not having some affronts cast upon Me, if I had none with Me to preserve a reverence to me: For many people had (at that time) learned to think those hard thoughts, which they have since abundantly vented against Me, both by words and deeds.

The summe of that businesse was this:

Those men and their adherents were then looked upon by the affrighted vulgar, as greater protectours of their Laws and Liberties, then my Self, and so worthier of their protection. I leave them to God, and their own Consciences, who if guilty of evil machinations; no present impunity, ty, or popular vindications of them will be subterfuge sufficient to rescue them from those exact Tribunals.

To which, in the obstructions of Justice among men, we must religiously appeal, as being an argument to us Christians of that after unavoidable judgement, which shall re-judge what among men is but corruptly decided, or not at all.

I endeavored to have prevented, if God had seen fit, those future commotions, which I foresaw, would in all likelihood follow some mens activity (if not restrained) and so now hath done, to the undoing of many thousands; the more is the pity.

But to over-aw the freedome of the Houses, or to weaken their just Authority by any violent impressions upon them, was not at all my designe: I thought I had so much Justice and Reason on my side, as should not have needed so rough assistance; and I was resolved rather to bear the repulse with patience, then to use such hazardous extremities.

But thou, O Lord, art my witnesse in heaven, and in my Heart: If I have purposed any violence or oppression against the Innocent: or if there were any such wickednes in my thoughts:

Then let the enemy persecute my soul, and tread my life to the ground, and lay mine Honour in the dust.

Thou

Thou that seest not as man seeth, but lookest beyond - all popular appearances, searching the heart, and trying - the reins, and bringing to light the hidden things of dark- - nesse, shew thy self.

Let not my afflictions be esteemed (as with wise and godly men they cannot be) any argument of my sinne, in that matter: more then their impunity among good men is any sure token of their Innocency.

But forgive them wherein they have done amisse, though they are not punished for it in this world.

Save thy servant from the privy conspiracies, and open violence of bloody and unreasonable men, according to the uprightnesse of my heart, and the innocency of my hands in this matter.

Plead my cause, and maintain my right, O thou that sitteest in the Throne, judging rightly, that thy servant may ever rejoyce in thy salvation.

4. Upon the Insolency of the Tumults.

I Never thought any thing (except our sinnes) more ominously presaging all these mischiefs, which have followed, then those Tumults in London and Westminster, soon after the convening of this Parliament; which were not like a storm at Sea, (which yet wants not its terrour) but like - an Earth-quake, shaking the very foundations of all; then which nothing in the world hath more - of horroure.

As

As it is one of the most convincing Arguments that there is a God, while his power sets bounds to the raging of the Sea; so 'tis no lesse, that he restrains the madnesse of the people. Nor doth any thing portend more Gods displeasure against a Nation, then when he suffers the confluence and clamours of the vulgar, to passe all boundaries of Laws, and reverence to Authority.

Which those Tumults did to so high degrees of Insolence, that they spared not to invade the Honour and Freedome of the two Houses, menacing, reproching, shaking, yea, and assaulting some Members of both Houses, as they fancied, or disliked them: Nor did they forbear most rude and unseemly deportments both in contemptuous words and actions, to my Self and my Court.

Nor was this a short fit or two of shaking, as an ague, but a quotidian feaver, alwaies encreasing to higher inflammations, impatient of any mitigation, restraint, or remission.

First, they must be a guard against those fears, which some men scared themselves and others withall; when indeed nothing was more to be feared and lesse to be used by wise men, then those tumultuary confluxes of mean and rude people, who are taught first to petition, then to protect, then to dictate, and last to command and overaw the Parliament.

All obstructions in Parliament (that is, all freedom of differing in Votes, and debating matters with reason and candour) must be taken away with these Tumults: By these must the Houses be purged, and all rotten Members (as they pleased to count them) cast out: By these the obstinacie of men resolved to discharge their Consciences must be subdued; by these all factious, seditious, and schismaticall proposalls against Government Ecclesiasticall or Civil, must be backed and abetted, till they prevailed.

Generally, who ever had most mind to bring forth confusion and ruine upon Church & State, used the midwifery of those Tumults; whose riot and impatience was such, that they would not stay the ripening and season of Counsels, or fast production of Acts in the order, gravitie, and deliberatenesse befitting a Parliament; but ripped up with barbarous crueltie, and forcibly cut out abortive Votes, such as their Inviters and Incouragers most fancied.

Yea, so enormous and detestable were their outrages, that no sober man could be without an infinite shame and sorrow, to see them so tolerated and connived at by some; countenanced, incouraged, and applauded by others.

What good man had not rather want any thing he most desired, for the publick good, then obtain it by such unlawfull and irreligious means?

C

- But mens passions and Gods directions seldome agree; violent designs and motions must have sutable engines: such as too much attend their own ends, seldome confine themselves to Gods means. Force must crowd in what Reason will not lead.

- Who were the chief Demagogues and Patrons of Tumults, to send for them, to flatter and embolden them, to direct and tune their clamorous importunities, some men yet living are too conscious to pretend ignorance: God in his due time will let these see, that those were no fit means to be used for attaining his ends.

- But, as it is no strange thing for the Sea to rage, when strong winds blow upon it; so neither for Multitudes to become insolent, when they have men of some reputation for parts and pietie to set them on.

That which made their rudenesse most formidable, was, that many complaints being made, and Messages sent by My Self and some of both Houses; yet no order for redresse could be obtained with any vigour and efficacie, proportionable to the malignitie of that now far-spread disease, and predominant mischief.

- Such was some mens stupiditie, that they feared no inconvenience; Others petulancie, that they joyed to see their betters shamefully outraged and abused, while they knew their onely securi-

tie

tie consisted in vulgar flatterie : So insensible were they of Mine, or the two Houses common safetie and Honours.

Nor could ever any order be obtained impartially to examine, censure, and punish the known Boutefeus, and impudent Incendiaries, who boasted of the influence they had and used, to convoke those Tumults as their advantages served.

Yea, some (who should have been wiser Statesmen) owned them as friends, commending their Courage, Zeal, and Industry; which to sober men could seem no better then that of the devil, who goes about seeking whom he may deceive and devoure.

I confesse, when I found such a deafnesse, that no Declaration from the Bishops, who were first foully insolenced and assaulted; nor yet from other Lords and Gentlemen of Honour; nor yet from My Self, could take place, for the due repression of these Tumults; and securing not onely Our freedome in Parliament, but Our very Persons in the streets; I thought My Self not bound by My presence, to provoke them to higher boldnesse and contempts; I hoped by My with-drawing to give time, both for the ebbing of their tumultuous furie, and others regaining some degrees of modestie and sober sense.

Some may interpret it as an effect of Pusillanimie in any man, for popular terrours to desert his publick station. But I think it a hardinesse beyond true valour, for a wise man to set himself against the breaking in of a Sea; which to resist, at present, threatens imminent danger; but to withdraw, gives it space to spend its furie, and gains a fitter time to repair the breach. Certainly a Gallant man had rather fight to great disadvantages for number and place in the field, in an orderly way, then skuffle with an undisciplined rabble.

Some suspected and affirmed that I meditated a War, (when I went from Whitehall onely to redeem My Person and Conscience from violence) God knows I did not then think of a War. Nor will any prudent man conceive that I would by so many former, and some after Acts, have so much weakned My Self, if I had purposed to engage in a War, which to decline by all means, I denied My Self in so many particulars : 'Tis evident I had then no Armie to flie unto, for protection, or vindication.

Who can blame Me, or any other, for a withdrawing our selves from the daily baitings of the Tumults, not knowing whether their furie and discontent might not flie so high, as to worrie and tear those in pieces, whom as yet they but plaied with in their paws? God who is My sole

sole Judge, is My Witnesse in Heaven, that I never had any thoughts of going from My House at Whitehall, if I could have had but any reasonable fair Quarter ; I was resolved to bear much, and did so; but I did not think My Self bound to prostitute the Maiestie of My Place and Person, the safety of My Wife and Children, to those, who are prone to insult most, when they have objects and opportunity most capable of their rudenesse and petulancy.

But this businesse of the Tumults (whereof some have given already an account to God, others yet living know themselves desperately guiltie) time and the guilt of many hath so smothered up, and buried, that I think it best to leave it as it is : Onely I believe the just Avenger of all disorders, will in time make those men, and that City, see their sinne in the glasse of their punishment. 'Tis more then an even-lay that they may one day see themselves punished by that way they offended.

Had this Parliament, as it was in its first Election and Constitution, sate full and free, the Members of both Houses being left to their freedome of Voting, as in all reason, honour, and Religion, they should have been; I doubt not but things would have been so carried, as would have given no lesse content to all good men, then they wished or expected.

- For, I was resolved to hear reason in all things,
 - and to consent to it so farre as I could comprehend it : but as Swine are to Gardens and orderly Plantations, so are Tumults to Parliaments, and Plebeian concourses to publick Councels, turning all into disorders and sordid confusions.

- I am prone sometimes to think, That had I called this Parliament to any other place in England (as I might opportunely enough have done) the sad consequences in all likelihood, with Gods blessing, might have been prevented. A Parliament would have been welcome in any place; no place afforded such confluence of various and vitious humours , as that where it was unhappily convened. But we must leave all to
 - God, who orders our disorders , and magnifies his wisdom most, when our follies and miseries are most discovered.

But thou, O Lord, art My refuge and defence, to thee I may safely flie, who rulest the raging of the Sea , and the madnesse of the People.

The flouds, O Lord, the flouds are come in upon me, and are ready to overwhelm me.

I look upon my sins, and the sins of My people, (which are the tumults of our souls against Thee, O Lord,) as the just cause of these popular inundations which thou permittest to overbear all the banks of loyalty, modestie, laws, Justice, and Religion.

But

But thou that gatheredst the waters into one place, and madest the drie land to appear, and after didst asswage the floud which drowned the world, by the word of thy power; Rebuke those boasts of the people, and deliver Me from the rudenesse and strivings of the multitude.

Restore, we beseech thee, unto us, the freedome of our Councils and Parliaments; make us unpassionately to see the light of Reason and Religion, and withall order, and gravitie to follow it, as it becomes Men and Christians; so shall we praise thy Name, who art the God of order and counsel.

What man cannot, or will not repressse, thy omnipotent Justice can and will.

O Lord, give them that are yet living, a timely sense and sorrow for their great sinne, whom thou knowest guilty of raising or not suppressing those disorders: Let shame here, and not suffering hereafter be their punishment.

Set bounds to our passion by Reason, to our errours by Truth, to our sedition by Laws duely executed, and to our schismes by Charity, that we may be, as thy Ierusalem, a City at unity in it self.

This grant, O My God, in thy good time, for Iesus Christs sake, Amen.

5. Upon His Majesties passing the Bill for the Trienniall Parliaments: And after settling this, during the pleasure of the two Houses.

THat the world might be fully confirmed in My purposes at first, to contribute, what in Justice, Reason, Honour, and Conscience I could, to the Happie successe of this Parliament, (which had in Me no other designe, but the General good of My Kingdoms:) I willingly passed the BILL for Trienniall Parliaments: which, as gentle and seasonable Physick, might (if well applied) prevent any distempers from getting any head or prevailing; especially, if the remedie proved not a disease beyond all remedie.

I conceived, this Parliament would find work with convenient recesses for the first three years; But I did not imagine that some men would thereby have occasioned more work then they found to do, by undoing so much as they found well done to their hands. Such is some mens activitie, that they will needs make work rather - then want it, and choose to be doing amisse, rather then do nothing.

When that first Act seemed too scantie to satisfy some mens fears, and compasse publick affairs; I was perswaded to grant that BILL
of

of Sitting during the pleasure of the Houses, which amounted in some mens sense to as much as the perpetuating this Parliament. By this Act of highest confidence, I hoped for ever to shut out, and lock the doore upon all present Jealousies, and future mistakes: I confesse, I did not thereby intend to shut My self out of doors, as some men have now required me.

True, it was an Act unparalleled by any of My Predecessours; yet cannot in reason admit of any worse interpretation then this, of an extreme confidence I had, that My Subjects would not make ill use of an Act, by which I declared so much to trust them, as to deny my self in so high a point of my Prerogative.

For good Subjects will never think it just or fit that my condition should be worse by my bettering theirs: Nor indeed would it have been so in the events, if some men had known as well with moderation to use, as with earnestnesse to desire advantages of doing good or evil.

A continuall Parliament (I thought) would but keep the Common-weal in tune, by preserving Laws in their due execution and vigour, wherein My interest lies more then any mans, since by those Laws, My Rights as a KING, would be preserved no lesse then my Subjects; which is all I desired. More then the Law gives me I would not have, & lesse the meanest Subject should not.

Some

Some (as I have heard) gave it out , that I soon repented me of that settling Act : and many would needs perswade me , I had cause so to do ; but I could not easily nor suddenly suspect such ingratitude in men of Honours; That the more I granted them , the lesse I should have, and enjoy with them. I still counted My self undiminished by My largest concessions , if by them I might gain and confirm the love of My People.

Of which, I do not yet despair , but that God will still blesse Me with increase of it ; when Men shall have more leisure, and lesse prejudice; that so with unpassionate representations they may reflect upon those, (as I think) not more princely then friendly contributions , which I granted towards the perpetuating of their happiness, who are now onely miserable in this, That some mens ambition will not give them leave to enjoy what I intended for their good.

Nor do I doubt, but that in Gods due time, the loyall and cleared affections of My people, will strive to return such retributions of Honour, and love to Me , or My posteritie, as may fully compensate both the acts of My confidence and My suffering for them ; which (God knows) have been neither few nor small , nor short; occasioned chiefly by a perswasion I had , that I could not grant too much, or distrust too little, to Men, that

that being professedly My Subjects, pretended singular pietie, and religious strictnesse.

The injurie of all injuries is, That which some men will needs load me withall; as if I were a wilfull and resolved Occasioner of My own and My Subjects miseries; while (as they confidently, but (God knows) falsely divulge) I repening at the establishment of this Parliament, endeavoured by force and open hostilitie to undo what by my Royall assent I had done. Sure it had argued a very short sight of things, and extreme faintitie of mind in Me, so farre to bind My own hands at their request, if I had shortly meant to have used a Sword against them. God knows, though I had then a sense of injuries, yet not such, as to think them worth vindicating by a Warre: I was not then compelled, as since, to injure My self by their not using favours, with the same candour wherewith they were conferred. The Tumults indeed threatened to abuse all Acts of Grace, and turn them into wantonnesse; but I thought at length their own fears, whose black arts first raised up those turbulent Spirits, would force them to conjure them down again.

Nor if I had justly resented any indignities put upon me, or others, was I then in any capacitie to have taken just revenge in an hostile and Warlike way upon those, whom I knew so well

well fortified in the love of the meaner sort of the people , that I could not have given my enemies greater , and more desired advantages against me , then by so unprincely inconstancy, to have assaulted them with Arms , thereby to scatter them, whom but lately I had solemnly settled by an Act of Parliament.

God knows , I longed for nothing more then that My self and My Subjects might quietly enjoy the fruits of My many condescendings.

It had been a course full of sinne , as well as of hazard and dishonour, for me to go about the cutting up of that by the Sword, which I had so lately planted , so much (as I thought) to My Subjects content, and Mine own too, in all probability : If some men had not feared where no fear was , whose securitie consisted in scaring others.

I thank God, I know so well the sinceritie and uprightnesse of My own heart , in passing that great Bill , which exceeded the very thoughts of former times ; That although I may seem lesse a Politician to men, yet I need no secret distinctions or evasions before God. Nor had I any reservations in My own Soul, when I passed it; nor repentings after , till I saw that my letting some men go up to the Pinnacle of the Temple, was a temptation to them to cast me down headlong.

Concluding,

Concluding, that without a miracle, Monarchy it self, together with me, could not but be dashed in pieces, by such a precipitious fall as they intended. Whom God in mercie forgive, and make them see at length, That as many kingdoms as the Devil shewed our Saviour and the glory of them, (if they could be at once enjoyed by them) are not worth the gaining, by waies of sinfull ingratitude, and dishonour, which hazards a Soul worth more Worlds then this hath Kingdomes.

But God hath hitherto preserved Me, and made Me to see, That it is no strange thing for men, left to their own passions, either to do much evil themselves, or abuse the overmuch goodnesse of others, whereof an ungratefull Surfet is the most desperate and incurable disease.

I cannot say properly that I repent of that Act, since I have no reflections upon it as a sinne of my will, though an error of too charitable a judgement: onely I am sorrie other mens eies should be evil, because mine were good.

To thee, (O my God) do I still appeal, whose all discerning Justice sees through all the disguises of mens pretensions, and deceitfull darkneses of their hearts.

Thou gavest me a heart to grant much to My Subjects; and now I need a heart fitted to suffer much from some of them.

Thy

- Thy will be done, though never so much to the crossing of ours, even when we hope to do what might be most conformable to thine and theirs too; who pretended they aimed at nothing else.

- Let thy grace teach me wisely to enjoy as well the frustratings, as the fulfillings of My best hopes, and most specious desires.

I see while I thought to allay others fears, I have raised Mine own; and by settling them, have unsettled My self.

Thus have they requited me evil for good, and hatred for my good will towards them.

O Lord be thou My Pilot in this dark and dangerous storm, which neither admits My return to the Port whence I set out, nor my making any other, with that safety and honour which I designed.

'Tis easie for thee to keep Me safe in the love and confidence of My people; nor is it hard for thee to preserve Me amidst the unjust hatred and jealousies of too many, which thou hast suffered so farre to prevail upon Me, as to be able to pervert and abuse my acts of greatest Indulgence to them, and assurance of them.

- But no favours from Me can make others more guilty than My self may be, of misusing those many and great ones, which thou, O Lord, hast conferred on Me.

- I beseech Thee give Me and them such Repentance, as thou wilt accept, and such Grace as we may not abuse.

- Make me so farre happy as to make a right use of others abuses, and by their failings of Me, to reflect with a reforming displeasure, upon My offences against Thee.

So,

So although for My sins I am by other mens sins deprived of thy temporall blessings, yet I may be happy to enjoy the comfort of thy mercies, which often raise the greatest Sufferers to be the most glorious Saints.

6. Upon his Majesties retirement from Westminster.

With what unwillingnesse I withdrew from Westminster, let them judge, who, unprovided of tackling and victuall, are forced to Sea by a storm; yet better do so, then venture splitting or sinking on a Lee shore.

I stayed at Whitehall, till I was driven away by shame more then fear; to see the barbarous rudenesse of those Tumults, who resolved they would take the boldnesse to demand any thing, and not leave either My self, or the Members of Parliament the libertie of our Reason, and Conscience to denie them any thing.

Nor was this intolerable oppression My case alone, (though chiefly Mine:) For the Lords and Commons might be content to be overvoted by the major part of their Houses, when they had used each their own freedome.

Whose agreeing Votes were not by any Law or reason conclusive to My Judgement; nor can they include, or carrie with them My consent, whom they represent not in any kind; Nor am

am I further bound to agree with the Votes of both Houses, then I see them agree with the will of God, with My just Rights, as a King, and the generall good of My People. I see, that as many men, they are seldome of one mind; and I may oft see that the major part of them are not in the right.

I had formerly declared to sober and moderate minds, how desirous I was to give all just content, when I agreed to so many Bills, which had been enough to secure and satisfie all: If some mens Hydropick insatiableness had not learned to thirst the more, by how much more they drank; whom no fountain of Royall bountie was able to overcome; so resolved they seemed, either utterly to exhaust it, or barbarously to obstruct it.

Sure it ceases to be Counsell, when not Reason is used, as to men, to perswade; but force and terrour as to beasts, to drive and compell men to assent to whatever tumultuarie patrones shall project. He deserves to be a slave without pitie, or redemption, that is content to have the rationall sovereigntie of his Soul, and libertie of his will and words so captivated.

Nor do I think My Kingdomes so considerable, as to preserve them with the forfeiture of that freedome, which cannot be denied Me as a King, because it belongs to Me as a man, and a Christian;

Christian; owning the dictates of none but God to be above Me, as obliging Me to consent. Better for Me to die enjoying this Empire of My Soul, which subjects Me onely to God, so farre as by Reason or Religion he directs Me, then live with the Title of a King, if it should carry such a vassalage with it, as not to suffer Me to use My Reason and Conscience, in which I declare as a King, to like or dislike,

So far am I from thinking the Majestie of the Crown of England to be bound by any Coronation Oath, in a blind and brutish formalitie, to consent to what ever its subject in Parliament shall require, as some men will needs inferre; while denying Me any power of a Negative voice as King, they are not ashamed to seek to deprive Me of the liberty of using My Reason with a good Conscience, which themselves, and all the Commons of England enjoy proportionable to their influence on the publick; who would take it very ill to be urged, not to denie whatever My Self, as King, or the House of Peers with Me should, not so much desire, as enjoyn them to passe. I think My Oath fully discharged in that point by My Governing onely by such Laws, as My people with the House of Peers have chosen, and My Self have consented to. I shall never think My Self conscientiously tied to go as oft against My conscience, as I should consent to such new Proposals, which My Reason, in Justice, Honour, and Religion bids Me denie.

D

such

Yet so tender I see some men are of their being subject to Arbitrary Government, (that is, the Law of anothers will, to which themselves give no consent) that they care not with how much dishonour and absurditie, they make their King the onely man, that must be subject to the will of others : without having power left him, to use his own reason, either in Person, or by any Representation.

And if My dissentings at any time were (as some have suspected, and uncharitably avowed) out of errour, opinion, activenesse, weaknesse, or wilfulnesse, and what they call obstinacy in Me (which not true judgement of things, but some vehement prejudice or passion hath fixed on My mind ;) yet can no man think it other then the Badge and Method of slavery, by savage rudenesse, and importunate obtrusions of violence, to have the mist of his Errour and Passion dispelled, which is a shadow of Reason, and must serve those that are destitute of the substance. Sure that man cannot be blameable to God or Man, who seriously endeavours to see the best reason of things, and faithfully follows what he takes for Reason : The uprightnesse of his intentions, will excuse the possible failings of his understanding. If a Pilot at Sea cannot see see the Pole-starre, it can be no fault in him to steer his course by such starres as do best appear to him. It argues rather those men to be conscious of their defects of Reason, and convincing Arguments, who call in the assistance of mere force, to carry on the weaknesse of their Counsels and Proposals. I may, in the Truth and uprightness of My heart, protest before God and Men; that I never wilfully opposed, or denied any thing that was in a fair way, after full and free debates propounded to Me by the two Houses, further then I thought in good reason, I might and was bound to do.

Nor did any thing ever please Me more, then when my Judgement so concurred with theirs, that I might with good Conscience consent to them: yea, in many things where not absolute and morall necessity of Reason, but temporary convenience on point of Honour was to be considered; I chose rather to deny My Self, then them: as preferring that which they thought necessary for My Peoples good, before what I saw but convenient for My Self.

For I can be content to recede much from My own interests, and Personall Rights, of which I conceive My Self to be Master; but in what concerneth Truth, Justice, the Rights of the Church, and My Crown, together with the generall good of My Kingdoms; (all which I am bound

- to preserve as much as morally lies in Me :) here
 - I am, and ever shall be fixt and resolute, nor shall any Man gain my consent to that, wherein My
 - heart gives My tongue or hand the lie; nor will I be brought to affirm that to men, which in My conscience I denied before God. I will rather choose to wear a Crown of Thorns with my Saviour, then to exchange that of Gold (which is due to Me) for one of Lead, whose embased flexiblenesse shall be forced to bend, and comply to the various and oft contrary dictates of any Factions, when in stead of Reason, and Publick concernments, they obtrude nothing but what makes for the interest of parties, and flows from
 - the partialities of private wills and passions.

I know no resolutions more worthy a Christian King, then to preferre His Conscience before his Kingdoms.

*O my God, preserve thy servant in this Native, Ra-
 - tionall, and Religious freedome; For this I believe is thy will, that we should maintain: who though thou doest justly require us, to submit our understandings and
 - wills to thine; whose wisdom and goodnesse can neither
 - erre, nor misguide us; and so farre to denie our carnall
 - reason, in order to thy sacred Mysteries and commands, that we should believe and obey rather then dispute them; yet doest thou expect from us, onely such a reasonable service of thee, as not to do any thing for thee against* against our consciences: and as to the desires of men, en-joynest us to trie all things by the touch-stone of Reason and Laws, which are the rules of Civil Justice, and to declare our consents to that onely which our judgements approve.

Thou knowest, O Lord, how unwilling I was to desert that place, in which thou hast set me, and whereto the affairs of my Kingdoms at present did call me.

My People can witnesse how far I have been content for their good, to deny my self, in what thou hast subjected to my disposall.

O let not the unthankfull importunities, and tumultu-arie violence of some mens immoderate demands, ever betray Me to that degenerous and unmanly slavery, - which should make Me strengthen them by My consent in those things, which I think in My Conscience to be against thy glory, the good of my Subjects, and the discharge of my own dutie to Reason and Justice.

Make me willing to suffer the greatest indignities and injuries they presse upon Me, rather then commit the least sin against my Conscience.

Let the just liberties of My people be (as well they may) preserved in fair and equall wayes, without the slavery of my soul.

Thou that hast invested me by thy favours, in the power of a Christian King, suffer Me not to subject my Reason to other mens passions and designs, which to Me seem unreasonable, unjust, and irreligious: So shall I serve thee in the truth and uprightnesse of my heart, though I cannot satisfie these men.

Though I be driven from among them, yet give Me grace to walk alwayes uprightly before Thee.

Lead Me in the way of Truth and Justice; for these, I know, will bring Me at last to peace and happinesse with Thee, though for these I have much trouble among men.

This I beg of Thee for my Saviours sake.

7. Upon the Queens departure, and absence out of England.

ALthough I have much cause to be troubled at My wifes departure from Me, and out of My Dominions; yet not Her absence so much, as the scandall of that necessity, which drives her away, doth afflict Me: That She should be compelled by My own Subjects, and those pretending to be Protestants, to withdraw for her safety: This being the first example of any Protestant Subjects, that have taken up arms againd their King, a Protestant: For I look upon this now done in England, as another Act of the same Tragedie which was lately begun in Scotland; the brands of that fire being ill quenched, have kindled the like flames here. I fear such motions (so little to the adorning of the Protestant profession) may occasion a farther alienation of mind, and divorce of affections in Her from that Religion, which is the onely thing wherein we differ.

Which

Which yet God can, and I pray he would in time take away; and not suffer these practises to be any obstruction to Her judgement, since it is the motion of those men, (for the most part) who are yet to seek and settle their Religion for Doctrine, Government, and good manners; and so not to be imputed to the true English Protestants, who continue firm to their former settled Principles and Laws.

I am sorrie My relation to so deserving a Ladie, should be any occasion of Her danger and affliction, whose merits would have served Her for a protection among the savage Indians, while their rudenesse and barbarity knows not so perfectly to hate all Virtues, as some mens subtilty doth; among whom (I yet think) few are so malicious, as to hate Her for Her self. The fault is, that she is My wife.

All justice then as well as affection commands Me, to studie her security, who is onely in danger for My sake; I am content to be tossed, weather-beaten, and shipwrackt, so as She may be in safe Harbour.

This comfort I shall enjoy by her safetie in the midst of My Personall dangers, that I can perish but half, if she be preserved: in whose memorie and hopefull Posterity, I may yet survive the malice of My enemies, although they should be satiated with My blood.

I must leave her and them, to the love and loyalty of My good Subjects; and to his protection, who is able to punish the faults of Princes, and no lesse severely to revenge the injuries done to Them, by those who in all dutie and Allegiance, ought to have made good that safetie, which the Laws chiefly provide for Princes.

But common civility is in vain expected from those, that dispute their Loyaltie: Nor can it be safe (for any relation) to a King, to tarrie among them who are shaking hands with their Allegiance, under pretence of laying faster hold on their Religion.

'Tis pitie so noble and peacefull a soul should see, much more suffer, the rudenesse of those, who must make up their want of justice, with inhumanitie and impudence.

Her sympathy with Me in My afflictions, will make her vertues shine with greater lustre, as starres in the darkest nights; and assure the envious World, that she loves Me, not My fortunes.

Neither of us but can easily forgive, since We do not much blame the unkindnesse of the Generalitie, and Vulgar; for We see, God is pleased to trie both our patience, by the most self-punishing sin, the ingratitude of those, who having eaten of Our bread, and being enriched with Our bountie, have scornfully lift up themselves against against Us; and those of Our own Houſhold are become Our enemies. I pray God lay not their ſin to their charge, who think to ſatisfie all obligations to dutie, by their Corban of Religion and can leſſe endure to ſee, then to ſinne againſt their benefactors, as well as their Sovereignes.

But even that policie of my Enemies is ſo farre veniall, as it was neceſſarie to their deſignes by ſcandalous Articles, and all irreverent demeanour, to ſeek to drive her out of My Kingdoms; leſt by the influence of her example, eminent for love as a Wife, and Loyaltie as a Subject, ſhe ſhould have converted to, or retained in their love and Loyaltie, all thoſe whom they had a purpoſe to pervert.

The leſſe I may be bleſt with her companie, the more I will retire to God, and My own heart, whence no malice can baniſh Her. My enemies may envie, but they can never deprive Me of the enjoyment of Her virtues, while I enjoy My ſelf.

Thou, O Lord, whoſe juſtice at preſent ſees fit to ſcatter us, let thy mercy in thy due time, reunite us on earth, if it be thy will; however bring us both at laſt to thy heavenly Kingdome.

Preſerve us from the hands of our deſpitefull & deadly enemies, and prepare us by our ſufferings for thy preſence.

Though we differ in ſome things, as to Religion, (which is

is my greatest temporall infelicity) yet, Lord, give and accept the sinceritie of our affections, which desire to seek, to find, to embrace every Truth of thine.

Let both our Hearts agree in the love of thy self, and Christ crucified for us.

Teach us both what thou wouldst have us to know, in order to thy glory, our publick relations, and our souls eternall good, and make us carefull to do what good we know.

Let neither ignorance of what is necessary to be known, or unbelief, or disobedience to what we know, be our misery or our wilfull default.

Let not this great scandall of those My Subjects, which professe the same Religion with Me, be any hinderance to her love of any Truth thou wouldst have her to learn, nor any hardening of her in any error thou wouldst have cleared to her.

Let mine and other mens constancy be an Antidote against the poyson of their example

Let the truth of that Religion I professe, be represented to her judgement, with all the beauties of humility, loyalty, charity, and peaceableness; which are the proper fruits, and ornaments of it: Not in the odious disguises of levity, schisme, heresie, novelty, cruelty, and disloyalty, which some mens practises have lately put upon it.

Let her see thy sacred and saving Truths, as thine; that she may believe, love, and obey them as Thine, cleared from all rust and drosse of humane mixtures.

That in the glasse of thy Truth she may see thee, in those mercies which thou hast offered to us, in thy Son Jesus

Jesus Christ, our onely Saviour, and serve thee in all those Holy duties, which most agree with his Holy doctrine, and most imitable example.

The experience we have of the vanity, and uncertainty of all humane glory and greatnesse, in our scatterings and Eclipses, let it make us both so much the more ambitious to be invested in those durable honours, and perfections, which are onely to be found in thy self, and obtained through Jesus Christ.

8. Upon His Majesties repulse at Hull, and the fates of the Hothams.

MY repulse at Hull, seemed at the first view, an act of so rude disloyalty, that My greatest enemies had scarce confidence enough to abett, or own it: It was the first overt essay to be made, how patiently I could bear the losse of My Kingdoms.

God knows, it affected me more wth shame and sorrow for others, then with anger for my self; nor did the affront done to Me, trouble Me so much as their sin, which admitted no colour or excuse.

I was resolved how to bear this, & much more, with patience: But I foresaw they could hardly contain themselves within the compasse of this one unworthy act, who had effrontery enough to commit, or countenance it. This was but the hand of that cloud, which was soon after to overspread the whole Kingdome, and cast all into disorder and darknesse.

For

- For 'tis among the wicked Maximes of bold and disloyall undertakers: That bad actions must
 - alwayes be seconded with worse, and rather not
 - be begun, then not carried on: for they think the
 - retreat more dangerous then the assault, and hate
 - repentance more then perseverance in a fault.

This gave Me to see clearly through all the pious disguises, and soft palliations of some men; whose words were sometime smother
 - then oyl; but now I saw they would prove
 - very Swords.

Against which I having (as yet) no defence,
 - but that of a good Conscience, thought it My
 - best policie (with patience) to bear what I could
 - not remedie: And in this (I thank God) I had
 - the better of Hotham, that no disdain, or emotion
 - of passion transported Me, by the indignitie of
 - his carriage, to do or say any thing unbeseeming
 - My self, or unsuitable to that temper, which,
 - in greatest injuries, I think, best becomes a Christian,
 - as coming nearest to the great example
 - of Christ.

And indeed, I desire alwaies more to remember I am a Christian, then a King; for what the
 - Majestie of the one might justly abhorre, the charity of the other is willing to bear; what the - height of a King tempteth to revenge, the humilitie of a Christian teacheth to forgive. Keeping
 - in compasse all these impotent passions, whose
 - 8
 - excessive

excesse injures a man, more then his greatest enemies can; for these give their malice a full impression on our souls, which otherwaies cannot reach very farre, nor do us much hurt.

I cannot but observe, how God not long after so pleaded and avenged My cause in the eie of the world, that the most wilfully blind cannot avoid the displeasure to see it, and with some remorse and fear to own it, as a notable stroke and prediction of divine vengeance.

For, Sir John Hotham unrepached, unthreatened, uncursed by any language or secret imprecation of Mine, onely blasted with the Conscience of his own wickednesse, and falling from one inconstancie to another, not long after payes his own and his eldest Sons heads, as forfeitures of their disloyaltie to those men, from whom, surely he might have expected another reward, then thus to divide their heads from their bodies, whose hearts with them were divided from their KING.

Nor is it strange that they who employed them at first in so high a service, and so successfull to them, should not find mercie enough to forgive Him, who had so much premerited of them: For, Apostacie unto Loyaltie some men account the most unpardonable sinne.

Nor did a solitarie vengeance serve the turn, the cutting off one head in a Familie, is not enough to expiate the affront done to the head of the Common-weal. The eldest Son must be involved in the punishment, as he was infected with the sin of the Father, against the Father of his Countrey: Root and branch God cuts off in one day.
to

These observations are obvious to every fancy: God knows, I was so farre from rejoycing in the Hotham's ruine, (though it were such as was able to give the greatest thirst for revenge a full draught, being executed by them who first employed him against Me) that I so farre pitied him; as I thought he at first acted more against the light of his Conscience, then many other men do in the same cause.

For, he was never thought to be of that superstitious sownrenesse, which some men pretend to, in matters of Religion; which so darkens their judgement, that they cannot see any thing of Sin and Rebellion in those means they use, with intents to reform to their Models, of what they call Religion; who think all is gold of pietie, which doth but glister with a shew of zeal and fervencie.

Sir John Hotham was, I think, a man of another temper, and so most liable to those downright temptations of ambition, which have no cloke or cheat of Religion to impose upon themselves or others.

That

That which makes me more pitie him is, that after he began to have some inclinations towards a repentance for his sin, and reparation of his duty to Me, he should be so unhappie as to fall into the hands of their Justice, and not my mercie, who could as willingly have forgiven him, as he could have asked that favour of Me.

For I think clemencie a debt, which we ought to pay to those that crave it, when we have cause to believe they would not after abuse it; since God himself suffers us not to pay any thing for his mercie, but onely prayers and praises.

Poore Gentleman, he is now become a notable monument of unprosperous disloyaltie, teaching the world by so sad and unfortunate a spectacle, that the rude carriage of a Subject towards his Sovereigne, carries alwaies its own vengeance, as an unseparable shadow with it, and those oft prove the most fatall and implacable executioners of it, who were the first employers in the service.

After-times will dispute it, whether Hotham were more infamous at Hull, or at Tower-hill; though 'tis certain that no punishment so stains a mans Honour, as wilfull perpetrations of unworthy actions; which besides the conscience of the sin, brands with most indelible characters of infamy, the name and memory to posterity, who not engaged in the Factions of the times, have the most impartiall reflections on the actions.

But

But thou, O Lord, who hast in so remarkable a way avenged thy Servant, suffer me not to take any secret pleasure in it: for as his death hath satisfied the injury he did to me, so let me not by it gratifie any passion in me, lest I make thy vengeance to be mine, and consider the affront against me, more then the sinne against thee.

Thou indeed, without any desire or endeavour of mine, hast made his mischief to return on his own head, and his violent dealing to come down on his own pate.

Thou hast pleaded My cause, even before the sons of men, und taken the matter into thine own hands; that men may know it was thy work, and see that thou, Lord, hast done it.

I do not, I dare not say, So let Mine enemies perish O Lord! yea, Lord, rather give them repentance, pardon, and impunity, if it be thy blessed will.

Let not thy justice prevent the objects and opportunities of my mercy; yea, let them live and amend who have most offended Me in so high a nature; that I may have those to forgive, who bear most proportion in their offences to those trespasses against thy Majesty, which I hope thy mercy hath forgiven Me.

Lord lay not their sins (who yet live) to their charge for condemnation, but to their consciences for amendment: Let the lightning of this thunderbolt, which hath been so severe a punishment to one, be a terrour to all.

Discover to them their sin, who know not they have done amisse; and scare them from their sin, that sin of malicious wickednesse.

That

That preventing thy judgements by their true repentance, they may escape the strokes of thine eternal vengeance.

And do thou, O Lord, establish the Throne of thy servant in mercy and truth meeting together; let my Crown ever flourish in righteousness and peace, kissing each other.

Hear my prayer, O Lord, who hast taught us to pray for, to do good to, and to love our enemies, for thy sake: who hast prevented us with offertures of thy love, even when we were thine enemies; and hast sent thy Sonne Jesus Christ to die for us, when we were disposed to crucifie him.

9. Upon the Lifting, and raising Armies against the King.

I Find that I am at the same point and posture I was, when they forced Me to leave Whitehall: What Tumults could not do, an Armie must; which is but Tumults lifted, and enrolled to a better order, but as bad an end: My recess hath given them confidence that I may be conquered.

And so I easily may as to any outward strength, which, God knows, is little or none at all: But I have a Soul invincible through Gods grace enabling Me; here I am sure to be Conquerour, if God will give Me such a measure of Constancie, as to fear him more then man; and to love

E

the

the inward peace of My Conscience, before any outward tranquillity.

And must I be opposed with force, because they have not reason wherewith to convince me? O my soul! be of good courage, they confesse their known weaknesse, as to Truth and Justice, who choose rather to contend by Armies, then by Arguments.

Is this the reward and thanks that I am to receive, for those many Acts of grace I have lately passed, and for those many indignities I have endured? Is there no way left to make Me a glorious KING, but by my sufferings?

It is a hard and disputable choice for a King that loves his People, and desires their love, either to kill his own Subjects, or to be killed by them.

Are the hazards and miseries of Civil War in the bowels of My most flourishing Kingdom, the fruits I must now reap after seventeen years living and reigning among them, with such a measure of Justice, Peace, Plenty, and Religion, as all Nations about either admired, or envied? notwithstanding some miscarriages in Government, which might escape rather through ill counsel of some men driving on their private ends, or the peevishnesse of others, envying the publick should be managed without them; or the hidden & insuperable necessities of State, then any propropensitie, I hope, of My Self, either to injuriousnesse or oppression.

Whose innocent blood during My reigne have I shed, to satisfie My lust, anger, or covetousnes? What Widows or Orphans tears can witnesse against Me; the just cry of which must now be avenged with My own blood? For the hazards of War are equal, nor doth the Canon know any respect of persons.

In vain is My Person excepted by a Parenthesis of words, when so many hands are armed against Me with swords,

God knows how much I have studied to see what ground of Justice is alledged for this War against Me; that so I might (by giving just satisfaction) either prevent, or soon end so unnaturall a motion; which (to many men) seems rather the productions of a surfet of peace, and wantonnesse of minds, or of private discontents, Ambition, and Faction (which easily find, or make causes of quarrel) then any reall obstructions of publick Justice, or Parliamentary Priviledge.

But this is pretended, and this I must be able to avoid and answer before God in My own conscience, however some men are not willing to believe Me, lest they should condemn themselves.

When I first with-drew from Whitehall, to see if I could allay the insolencies of the Tumults, (the not suppressing of which, no account in Reason can be given, (where an orderly Guard was granted) but onely to oppresse both Mine, and the two Houses freedome, of declaring and voting according to every mans Conscience) what obstructions of Justice were there further then this, that what seemed just to one man, might not seem so to another?

Whom did I by power protect against the Justice of Parliament?

That some men with-drew, who feared the partiality of their triall, (warned by my Lord of Straffords death) while the vulgar threatned to be their Oppressours, and Judges of their Judges, was from that instinct which is in all creatures, to preserve themselves. If any others refused to appear, where they evidently saw the current of Justice and Freedome so stopped and troubled by the Rabble, that their lawfull Judges either durst not come to the Houses, or not declare their sense with liberty and safety; it cannot seem strange to any reasonable man, when the sole exposing them to publick odium, was enough to ruine them, before their cause could be heard or tryed.

Had not factious Tumults over-born the Freedome and Honour of the two Houses; had they asserted their justice against them, and made the way open for all the Members quietly to come
and

and declare their Consciences : I know no man so dear to Me, whom I had the least inclination to advise either to with-draw himself, or denie appearing upon their summons, to whose sentence according to Law (I think) every Subject bound to stand.

Distempers (indeed) were risen to so great a height, for want of timely repressing the vulgar insolencies; that the greatest guilt of those which were voted and demanded as Delinquents, was this, That they would not suffer themselves to be over-aw'd with the Tumults, and their Patrons; nor compelled to abet by their suffrages or presence, the designs of those men who agitated innovations, and ruine, both in Church & State.

In this point I could not but approve their generous constancie and cautiousnesse; further then this I did never allow any mans refractorinesse against the Priviledges and Orders of the Houses; to whom I wished nothing more then Safetie, Fulnesse, and Freedome.

But the truth is, some men, and those not many, despairing in fair and Parliamentary waies by free deliberations and Votes, to gain the concurrence of the major part of Lords and Commons, betook themselves (by the desperate activity of factious Tumults) to sift and terrifie away all those Members, whom they saw to be of contrary minds to their purposes.

How oft was the businesse of the Bishops enjoying their Ancient places, and undoubted Priviledges in the House of Peers, carried for them by farre the major part of Lords. Yet after five repulses, contrary to all Order and Custome, it was by tumultuary instigations obtruded again, and by a few carried, when most of the Peers were forced to absent themselves.

In like manner, was the Bill against Root and Branch, brought on by tumultuary clamours, and schismaticall Terrours, which could never passe, till both Houses were sufficiently thinned and over-awed.

To which partiality, while in all Reason, Justice, and Religion, my conscience forbids Me by consenting to make up their Votes to Acts of Parliament; I must now be urged with an Army, and constrained either to hazard My own, and My Kingdoms ruine, by my Defence; or prostrate my Conscience to the blind obedience of those men, whose zealous superstition thinks, or pretends, they cannot do God and the Church a greater service, then utterly to destroy that Primitive, Apostolicall, and anciently Universall Government of the Church by Bishops.

Which if other mens judgements bind them to maintain, or forbids them to consent to the abolishing of it, Mine much more; who besides the grounds I have in My judgement, have also

also a most strict and indispenſable Oath upon My Conscience, to preserve that Order, and the Rights of the Church; to which most sacrilegious and abhorred Perjury, most unbeseeming a Christian King, should I ever by giving My consent be betrayed, I should account it infinitely greater misery, then any hath, or can befall Me; in as much as the least sinne hath more evil in it, then the greatest affliction. Had I gratified their Anti-episcopall Faction at first in this point, with my consent, and sacrificed the Ecclesiasticall Government and Revenues, to the furie of their covetousnesse, ambition, and revenge, I believe they would then have found no colourable necessitie of raising an Armie to fetch in, and punish Delinquents.

That I consented to the Bill of putting the Bishops out of the House of Peers, was done with a firm perswasion of their contentednesse to suffer a present diminution in their Rights and Honour for My sake, and the Common weals, which I was confident they would readily yield unto, rather then occasion (by the least obstruction on their part) any dangers to Me or to My Kingdom. That I cannot adde My consent for the totall extirpation of that Government (which I have often offered to all fit regulations) hath so much further tie upon My Conscience, as what I think Religious and Apostolicall; and so very Sacred and Divine, is not to be dispensed with, or destroyed, when what is onely of civill Favour, and priviledge of Honour granted to men of that Order, may with their consent who are concerned in it, be annulled.

This is the true state of those obstructions pretended to be in point of Justice, and Authoritie of Parliament; when I call God to witnesse, I knew none of such consequence as was worth speaking of a War, being onely such as Justice, Reason, and Religion had made in mine own and other mens Consciences.

Afterwards indeed, a great shew of Delinquents was made, which were but consequences necessarily following upon Mine, or others withdrawing from, or defence against violence: but those could not be the first occasion of raising an Armie against Me. Wherein I was so far from preventing them, (as they have declared often, that they might seem to have the advantage and Justice of the defensive part, and load Me with all the envie and injuries of first assaulting them) that God knows, I had not so much as any hopes of an Armie in My thoughts. Had the Tumults been Honourably and Effectually repressed by exemplary Justice, and the libertie of the Houses so vindicated, that all Members of either House might with Honour and Freedome, becoming such a Senate, have come and discharged their Consci-

Consciences, I had obtained all that I designed by my withdrawing, and had much more willingly, and speedily returned, then I retired; this being my necessity driving, the other my choice desiring.

But some men knew, I was like to bring the same judgement and constancie, which I carried with Me, which would never fit their designs: and so while they invited Me to come, and grievously complained of my absence, yet they could not but be pleased with it: especially when they had found out that plausible and popular pretext of raising an Armie to fetch in Delinquents: when all that while they never punished the greatest and most intolerable Delinquencie of the Tumults, and their excitors, which drove my Self, and so many of both Houses from their places, by most barbarous indignities, which yet in all Reason and Honour, they were as loth to have deserted, as those others were willing they should, that so they might have occasion to persecute them with the injuries of an Army, for not suffering more tamely the injuries of the Tumults.

That this is the true state and first drift and designe in raising an Armie against Me, is by the sequell so evident, that all other pretences vanish. For when they declared by Propositions, or Treaties, what they would have to appease them, there

there was nothing of consequence offered to me, or demanded of me, as any originall difference in any point of Law, or order of Justice. But among other lesser Innovations, this chiefly was urged, The Abolition of Episcopall, and the Establishment of Presbyterian Government.

All other things at any time propounded, were either impertinent as to any ground of a Warre, or easily granted by Me, and onely to make up a number, or else they were merely consequentiall, and accessary, after the Warre was by them unjustly begun.

I cannot hinder other mens thoughts, whom the noise and shew of pietie, and heat for Reformation and Religion, might easily so fill with prejudice, that all equality and clearnesse of judgement might be obstructed. But this was, and is, as to my best observation, the true state of affairs between us, when they first raised an Armie, with this designe, either to stop my mouth, or to force my consent: and in this truth, as to my conscience, (who was (God knows) as farre from meditating a Warre, as I was in the eie of the world from having any preparation for one) I find that comfort, that in the midst of all the unfortunate successes of this Warre, on my side, I do not think my Innocencie any whit prejudiced or darkened: Nor am I without that integrity, tie, and Peace before God , as with humble confidence to addresse my Prayer to Him.

For Thou, O Lord , seest clearly through all the cloudings of humane affairs; Thou judgest without prejudice: Thy omniscience eternally guides thy unerrable judgement.

O my God, the proud are risen against Me, and the assemblies of violent men have sought after my soul, and have not set Thee before their eyes.

Consider My enemies, O Lord, for they are many, and they hate Me with a deadly hatred without a cause.

For thou knowest, I had no passion, designe, or preparation to embroyl my Kingdoms in a Civil Warre; whereto I had least temptation, as knowing I must adventure more than any, and could gain least of any by it.

Thou, O Lord, art my witnesse how oft I have deplored, and studied to divert the necessity thereof, wherein I cannot well be thought so prodigally thirsty of my Subjects bloud, as to venture my own Life, which I have been oft compelled to do in this unhappy Warre; and which were better spent to save, then to destroy my People.

O Lord, I need much of thy grace, with patience to bear the many afflictions thou hast suffered some men to bring upon Me ; but much more to bear the unjust reproches of those, who not content that I suffer most by the Warre, will needs perswade the world, that I have raised first or given just cause to raise it.

The confidence of some mens false tongues is such, that they would make Me almost suspect my own Innocencie:

Yea,

Yea, I could be content (at least by my silence) to take upon Me so great a guilt before men, if by that I might allay the malice of my Enemies, and redeem my People from this miserable Warre, since thou, O Lord, knowest my innocency in this thing.

Thou wilt find out bloody and deceitfull men; many of whom have not lived out half their dayes, in which they promised themselves the enjoyment of the fruits of their violent and wicked Counsels.

Save, O Lord, thy servant, as hitherto thou hast, and in thy due time scatter the people that delight in Warre.

Arise, O Lord, lift up thy self, because of the rage of mine Enemies, which encreaseth more and more. Behold them that have conceived mischief, travelled with iniquitie, and brought forth falshood.

Thou knowest the chief designe of this Warre is, either to destroy My Person, or force My Judgement, and to make Me renege My Conscience and thy Truth.

I am driven to crosse Davids choice, and desire, rather to fall into the hands of men, by denying them, (though their mercies be cruel,) then into thy hands by sinning against My Conscience, and in that against thee, who art a consuming fire: Better they destroy Me, then thou shouldst damn Me.

Be thou ever the defence of My soul, who wilt save the upright in heart.

If nothing but My blood will satisfie My Enemies, or quench the flames of my Kingdoms, or thy temporall justice, justice, I am content, if it be thy will, that it be shed by Mine own Subjects hands.

But, O let the bloud of Me, though their King, yet a sinner, be washed with the bloud of My Innocent and Peace-making Redeemer, for in that thy Justice will find not onely a temporary expiation, but an eternall plenary satisfaction, both for My sins, and the sins of My People; whom I beseech thee still own for thine, and when thy wrath is appeased by My Death, O remember thy great mercies toward them! and forgive them O my Father! for they know not what they do.

10. Upon their seizing the Kings Magazines, Forts, Navy, and Militia.

HOW untruly I am Charged with the first raising of an Army, and beginning this Civil Warre, the eyes that onely pitie Me, and the Loyall hearts that durst onely pray for Me, at first might witnesse, which yet appear not so many on My side, as there were men in Arms listed against Me: My unpreparednesse for a War may well dis-hearten those that would help Me; while it argues (truly) my unwillingnesse to fight; yet it testifies for Me, that I am set on the defensive part, having so little hopes or power to offend others, that I have none to defend My self, or to preserve what is mine own from their proreption.

No man can doubt but they prevented Me in their purposes, as well as their injuries, who are so much beforehand in their preparations against Me, and surprisalls of my strength. Such as are not for Them, yet dare not be for Me; so overaw'd is their Loyaltie by the others numbers and terrours. I believe my Innocencie, and unpreparednesse to assert my Rights and Honour, makes Me the more guiltie in their esteem, who would not so easily have declared a Warre against Me, if I had first assaulted them.

They knew my chiefeſt Arms left Me, were those onely, which the ancient Christians were wont to use against their Persecutours, Prayers and Tears. These may serve a good mans turn, if not to Conquer as a Souldier, yet to suffer as a Martyr.

Their preventing of Me, and surprizing my Castles, Forts, Arms, and Navie, with the Militia, is so farre best for Me, that it may drive Me from putting any trust in the arm of flesh, and wholly to cast my Self into the protection of the living God, who can save by few, or none, as well as by many.

He that made the greedie Ravens to be Elias Caterers, and bring him food, may also make their surprisall of outward force and defence, an opportunitie to shew Me the speciall support of his power and protection.

I thank God, I reckon not now the want of the Militia, so much in reference to my own protection, as my Peoples.

Their many and sore oppressions grieve Me, I am above my own; what I want in the hands of Force and Power, I have in the wings of Faith and Praier.

But this is the strange method these men will needs take, to resolve their riddle of making Me a glorious King, by taking away my Kingly power: Thus I shall become a support to my Friends, and a Terrour to my Enemies; by being unable to succour the one, or suppress the other.

For thus have they designed, and proposed to Me, the new modelling of Sovereignty and Kingship; so without any realitie of power, so without any necessitie of subjection and obedience; that the Majestie of the Kings of England might hereafter, hang like Mahomets Tomb, by a magnetick Charm, between the Power and Priviledges of the two Houses, in an aierie imagination of Regalitie.

But I believe the surfet of too much Power, which some men have greedily seized on, and now seek wholly to devoure, will ere long make the Common-wealth sick both of it and them, since they cannot well digest it. Sovereigne power in Subjects seldome agreeing with the stomachs of Fellow-subjects.

Yet

Yet I have even in this point of the constant Militia sought, by satisfying their fears and importunities, both to secure my Friends, and overcome mine Enemies, to gain the peace of all, by depriving my Self of a sole power to help or hurt any; yielding the Militia (which is my undoubted Right no lesse then the Crown) to be disposed of as the two Houses shall think fit, during my time.

So willing am I to bury all Jealousies in them, of Me, and to live above all Jealousies of them, as to my Self; I desire not to be safer then I wish them and My People; if I had the sole actuall disposing of the Militia, I could not protect My People, further then they protected Me, and themselves; so that the use of the Militia is mutual. I would but defend my Self so farre, as to be able to defend my good subjects from those mens violence and fraud, who conscious to their own evil merits and designs, will needs perswade the world, that none but Wolves are fit to be trusted with the custody of the Shepherd and his Flock. Miserable experience hath taught My subjects, since power hath been wrested from Me, and employed against Me and Them; that neither can be safe, if both be not in such a way, as the Law hath entrusted the publick safetie and welfare.

Yet even this Concession of mine as to the exercise of the Militia, so vast and large, is not satisfactory factory to some men, which seem to be enemies not to Me onely, but to all Monarchy; and are resolved to transmit to posteritie such Jealousies of the Crown, as they should never permit it to enjoy its just and necessary Rights, in point of power, to which (at last) all Law is resolved, while thereby it is best protected.

But here Honour and Justice due to my Successors, forbid Me to yield to such a total alienation of that power from them, which civilitie and duty (no lesse then Justice and Honour) should have forbad them to have asked of Me.

For, although I can be content to eclipse my own beams, to satisfie their fears, who think they must needs be scorched or blinded, if I should shine in the full lustre of Kingly power, where-with God and the Laws have invested Me; yet I will never consent to put out the Sun of Sovereigntie to all Posterity, and succeeding Kings; whose just recovery of their Rights from unjust usurpations and extortions, shall never be prejudiced or obstructed by any Act of Mine, which indeed would not be more injurious to succeeding Kings, then to My Subjects; whom I desire to leave in a condition not wholly desperate for the future, so as by a Law to be ever subjected to those many factious distractions, which must needs follow the many-headed Hydra of Government; which as it makes a shew to the People

- ple to have more eyes to foresee; so they will find
 - it hath more mouths too, which must be satisfied : and (at best) it hath rather a monstrositie, then any thing of perfection, beyond that of right Monarchy; where counsel may be in many as the senses, but the supreme Power can be but in One as the Head.

Happily, when men have tried the horrors and malignant influence, which will certainly follow My enforced darknesse and eclypse (occasioned by the interposition and shadow of that bodie, which (as the Moon) receiveth its chiefest light from Me) they will at length more esteem and welcome the restored glory and blessing of the Suns light.

And if at present I may seem by My receding so much from the use of My Right, in the power of the Militia, to come short of the discharge of that trust, to which I am sworn for my Peoples protection; I conceive those men are guiltie of the enforced perjury, (if so it may seem) who compell Me to take this new and strange way of discharging My trust, by seeming to desert it;
 of protecting my Subjects, by exposing My Self to danger or dishonour, for their safetie and quiet.

Which in the conflicts of Civil Warre, and advantages of Power, cannot be effected but by some sild yielding; to which the greatest love of
 the

the publick peace, & the firmeſt aſſurance of Gods protection (ariſing from a good conſcience) doth more invite Me, then can be expected from other mens fears; which ariſing from the injuſtice of their actions (though never ſo ſucceſſeſfull) yet dare not adventure their Authours upon any other way of ſafetie, then that of the Sword and Militia, which yet are but weak defences againſt the ſtrokes of Divine Vengeance, which will overtake; or of mens own Conſciences, which alwayes attend injurious perpetrations.

For My Self, I do not think that I can want any thing, which providentiall neceſſity is pleaſed to take from Me, in order to my Peoples tranquillity and Gods glory, whoſe protection is ſufficient for Me; and he is able by his being with Me, abundantly to compensate to Me, as he did to Job, what ever honour, power, or libertie, the Chaldeans, the Sabeans, or the Devil himſelf can deprive Me of.

Although they take from Me all Defence of Arms and Militia, all refuge by land, of Forts, and Caſtles; all flight by ſea in my Ships, and Navie: yea, though they ſtudie to rob Me of the Hearts of my Subjects, the greateſt Treasuſe and beſt ammunition of a King, yet cannot they deprive Me of mine own innocency, or Gods mercie, nor obſtruct my way to Heaven.

Therefore, O my God, to thee I flie for help, if thou wilt be on my side, I shall have more with me, then can be against me.

There is none in Heaven, or in Earth, that I desire in comparison of Thee: In the losse of all, be thou more then all to Me. Make haste to succour me, Thou that never failest them, that put their trust in thee.

Thou seest I have no power to oppose them that come against Me, who are encouraged to fight under the pretence of fighting for Me: But my eyes are toward Thee.

Thou needest no help, nor shall I, if I may have thine: If not to conquer, yet at least to suffer.

If thou delightest not in my safetie and prosperity, behold, here I am, willing to be reduced to what thou wilt have me; whose Judgements oft begin with thine own Children.

I am content to be nothing, that Thou mayst be all.

Thou hast taught me, That no King can be saved by the multitude of an host; but yet thou canst save me by the multitude of thy mercies, who art the Lord of Hosts, and the Father of mercies.

Help me, O Lord, who am sore distressed on every side, yet be thou on my side, and I shall not fear what man can do unto mee.

I will give thy Justice the glory of my distresse.

O let thy mercy have the glory of my deliverance from them that persecute my Soul.

By my sinnes have I fought against Thee, and robbed thee of thy glory, who art thy subject, and justly mayst Thou

Thou, by mine own Subjects strip me of my strength, and eclipse my glory.

But shew thy self, O my hope, and onely refuge ! Let not mine enemies say, There is no help for him in his God.

Hold up my goings in thy paths, that my footsteps slip not.

Keep me as the apple of thine eye, hide me under the shadow of thy wings.

Shew thy marvellous loving kindnesse, O thou that savest by thy right hand, them that put their trust in thee, from those that rise up against them.

From the wicked that oppresse me, from my deadly enemies that compassse me about.

Shew me the path of life. In thy presence is fulnesse of joy, at thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore.

II. Upon the 19. Propositions first sent to the King ; and more afterwards.

ALthough there be many things they demand, yet if these be all, I am glad to see at what price they set My own safetie, and My Peoples peace; which I cannot think I buy at too dear a rate, save onely the parting with My Conscience and Honour. If nothing else will satisfie, I must choose rather to be as miserable and inglorious, as My enemies can make or wish Me.

Some things here propounded to Me, have been offered by Me : Others are easily granted:

The rest (I think) ought not to be obtruded upon Me, with the point of the Sword: nor urged with the injuries of a War, when I have already declared, that I cannot yield to them, without violating my Conscience: 'tis strange, there can be no method of peace, but by making war upon my soul.

Here are many things required of Me, but I see nothing offered to Me, by the way of gratefull exchange of Honour: or any requitall for those favours I have, or can yet grant them.

This Honour they do Me, to put Me on the giving part, which is more Princely and Divine. They cannot ask more then I can give, may I but reserve to my Self the Incommunicable jewel of my conscience, and not be forced to part with that, whose losse nothing can repair or requite.

Some things (which they are pleased to propound) seem unreasonable to Me, and while I have any Masterie of my Reason, how can they think I can consent to them? Who know they are such as are inconsistent with being either a King, or a good Christian. My yielding so much (as I have already) makes some men confident I will denie nothing.

The love I have of my Peoples peace, hath (indeed) great influence upon Me; but the love of Truth and inward Peace hath more.

Should I grant some things they require, I should not so much weaken my outward state of a King, as wound that inward quiet of my Conscience, which ought to be, is, and ever shall be (by Gods grace) dearer to me then my Kingdoms

Some things which a King might approve, yet in Honour and Policy are at some time to be denied to some men, lest He should seem not to dare to deny any thing, and give too much encouragement to unreasonable demands or importunities.

But to bind my self to a generall and implicate consent, to whatever they shal desire or propound (for such is one of their Propositions) were such a latitude of blind obedience, as never was expected from any Freeman, nor fit to be required of any man, much lesse of a King by his own Subjects; any of whom he may possibly exceed as much in wisdom, as he doth in place and power.

This were as if Sampson should have consented, not onely to bind his own hands, and cut off his hair, but to put out his own eyes, that the Philistins might with the more safety mock and abuse him, which they chose rather to do, then quite to destroy him, when he was become so tame an object, and fit occasion for their sport and scorn.

Certainly, to exclude all power of deniall, seems an arrogancy, least of all becoming those who pretend to make their addresses in an humble and loyall way of petitioning; who by that sufficiently confesse their own inferiority, which obligeth them to rest, if not satisfied, yet quieted with such an answer as the will and reason of their Superiour thinks fit to give; who is acknowledged to have a freedome and power of Reason, to consent, or dissent; else it were very foolish and absurd, to ask what another having not libertie to denie, neither hath power to grant.

But if this be My Right belonging to Me in Reason as a Man, and in Honour as a Sovereigne King, (as undoubtedly it doth) how can it be other then extreme injurie, to confine my Reason to a necessity of granting all they have a mind to ask , whose minds may be as differing from Mine both in Reason and Honour, as their aims may be, and their qualities are; which last, God and the Laws have sufficiently distinguished, making Me their Sovereigne, and them My Subjects : whose Propositions may soon prove violent oppositions, if once they gain to be necessary impositions upon the Regal Authority. Since no man seeks to limit and confine his King in Reason, who hath not a secret aim to share with him, or usurp upon him in Power and Dominion.

But they would have Me trust to their moderation, and abandon mine own discretion; that so I might verifie what representations some have made of Me to the world, that I am fitter to be their Pupill , then their Prince. Truly I am not so confident of My own sufficiency, as not willingly

ly

ly to admit the Counsell of others : But yet I am not so diffident of my Self, as brutishly to submit to any mens dictates, and at once to betray the Sovereigntie of Reason in My Soul, and the Majestie of My own Crown to any of my Subjects.

Least of all have I any ground of credulitie, to induce me fully to submit to all the desires of those men, who will not admit, or do refuse, and neglect to vindicate the freedome of their own and others, sitting and voting in Parliament.

Besides, all men that know them, know this, how young States-men (the most part) of these propounders are; so that, till experience of one seven years hath shewed me, how well they can govern themselves, and so much power as is wrested from Me, I should be very foolish indeed, and unfaithfull in my Trust, to put the reins of both Reason and Government, wholly out of my own, into their hands; whose driving is alreadie too much like Jebus, and whose forwardnesse to ascend the throne of Supremacie, portends more of Phaeton then of Phebus; God divert the Omen if it be his will

They may remember, that at best they sit in Parliament, as my Subjects, not my Superiours; called to be my Counsellours, nor Dictateurs; Their Summons extends to recommend their advice, not to command My dutie.

When

When I first heard of Propositions to be sent Me, I expected either some good Laws, which had been antiquated by the course of time, or overlaid by the corruption of manners, had been desired to a restauration of their vigour and due execution; or some evil customes preterlegall, and abuses personall had been to be removed: or some injuries done by My Self, and others, to the Common-weal, were to be repaired, or some equable offertures were to be tendred to Me, wherein the advantages of my Crown being considered by them, might fairly induce Me to condescend, to what tended to my Subjects good, without any great diminution of My Self, whom Nature, Law, Reason, and Religion bind Me (in the first place) to preserve: without which it is impossible to preserve my People, according to my Place.

Or (at least) I looked for such moderate desires of due Reformation of what was (indeed) amisse in Church and State, as might still preserve the foundation and essentialls of Government in both; not shake and quite overthrow either of them, without any regard to the Laws in force, the wisdom and pietie of former Parliaments, the ancient and universall practise of Christian Churches; the Rights and Priviledges of particular men: Nor yet any thing offered in lieu, or in the room of what must be destroyed; which might might at once reach the good end of the others Institution, and also supplie its pretended defects, reform its abuses, and satisfie sober and wise men, not with soft and specious words, pretending zeal and speciall pietie; but with pregnant and solid reasons both divine and humane, which might justifie the abruptnesse and necessity of such vast alterations.

But in all their Propositions I can observe little of these kinds, or to these ends: Nothing of any Laws disjoynted, which are to be restored; of any right invaded; of any justice to be unobstructed; of any compensations to be made; of any impartiall reformation to be granted; to all, or any of which, Reason, Religion, true Policie, or any other humane motives might induce Me.

But as to the main matters propounded by them at any time, in which is either great novelty, or difficultie, I perceive that what were formerly look'd upon as Factions in the State, and Schismes in the Church, and so punishable by the Laws, have now the confidence, by vulgar clamours, and assistance (chiefly) to demand not onely Tolerations of themselves, in their vanitie, novelty, and confusion; but also Abolition of the Laws against them, and a totall extirpation of that Government, whose Rights they have a mind to invade.

This,

- This, as to the main; other Propositions are (for the most part) but as waste paper, in which those are wrapped up to present them somewhat more handsomely.

Nor do I so much wonder at the varietie, and horrible noveltie of some Propositions, (there being nothing so monstrous, which some fancies are not prone to long for.)

- This casts Me into, not an admiration, but an extasie how such things should have the fortune to be propounded in the name of the two Houses of the Parliament of England: among whom, I am very confident, there was not a fourth part of the Members of either House, whose judgements free, single, and apart, did approve or desire such destructive changes in the Government of the Church.

I am perswaded there remains in farre the major part of both Houses, (if free, and full) so much Learning, Reason, Religion, and just moderation, as to know how to sever between the use and the abuse of things; the institution, and the corruption; the Government and the Mis-government; the Primitive Patterns, and the aberrations or blottings of after Copies.

- Sure they could not all, upon so little, or no Reason (as yet produced to the contrary) so soon renounce all regard to the Laws in force, to antiquitie, to the pietie of their reforming Progenitours, nitours, to the prosperitie of former times in this Church and State, under the present Government of the Church.

Yet, by a strange fatalitie, these men suffer, either by their absence, or silence, or negligence, or supine credulitie, (believing that all is gold, which is gilded with shews of Zeal and Reformation) their private dissenting in Judgement, to be drawn into the common sewer or stream of the present vogue and humour; which hath its chief rise and abetment from those popular clamours and Tumults, which served to give life and strength to the infinite activitie of those men, who studied with all diligence, and policy, to improve to their innovating designs, the present distractions.

Such Armies of Propositions, having so little in My Judgement of Reason, Justice, and Religion on their side; as they had Tumult and Faction for their rise, must not go alone, but ever be backt and seconded, with Armies of Souldiers: Though the second should prevail against My Person, yet the first shall never overcome Me, further then I see cause; for, I look not at their number and power so much, as I weigh their Reason and Justice.

Had the two Houses first sued out their livery, and once effectually redeemed themselves from the Wardship of the Tumults, which can be no other then the hounds that attend the crie, and hollow of those Men, who hunt after Factious, and private Designes, to the ruine of Church and State.)

Did My Judgement tell Me, that the Propositions sent to Me were the Results of the major part of their Votes, who exercise their freedome, as well as they have a right to sit in Parliament: I should then suspect my own judgement, for not speedily and fully concurring with every one of them.

For, I have charitie enough to think, there are wise men among them: and humilitie to think, that, as in some things I may want, so 'tis fit I should use their advice, which is the end for which I called them to a Parliament. But yet I cannot allow their wisdom such a completenessse and inerrabilitie, as to exclude my Self; since none of them hath that part to Act, that Trust to discharge, nor that Estate and Honour to preserve, as my Self; without whole Reason concurrent with theirs, (as the Suns influence is necessary in all Natures productions) they cannot beget, or bring forth any one complete and authoritative Act of publick wisdom, which makes the Laws.

But the unreasonableness of some Propositions, is not more evident to Me then this is, That they are not the joynt and free desires of those those in their major number, who are of right to sit and Vote in Parliament.

For, many of them favour very strong of that old leaven of Innovations, masked under that name of Reformation; (which in my two last famous Predecessours dayes, heaved at, and sometime threatned both Prince and Parliaments :) But, I am sure, was never wont so farre to infect the whole masse of the Nobilitie and Gentry of this Kingdome, however it dispersed among the Vulgar: Nor was it likely so suddenly to taint the major part of both Houses, as that they should unanimously desire, and affect so enormous and dangerous Innovations in Church and State; contrary to their former education, practise, and judgement.

Not that I am ignorant, how the choice of many Members was carried by much Faction in the Countreys; some thirsting after nothing more, then a passionate revenge of whatever displeasure they had conceived against Me, my Court, or the Clergy.

But all Reason bids Me impute these sudden and vast desires of change to those few, who armed themselves with the many-headed, and many-handed Tumults.

No lesse doth Reason, Honour, and Safety both of Church and State command Me, to chew
such

such morsells, before I let them down; If the straitnesse of my Conscience will not give Me leave to swallow down such Camels, as others do, of Sacriledge, and injustice both to God and man, they have no more cause to quarrell with Me, then for this, that my throat is not so wide as theirs. Yet by Gods help I am resolved, that nothing of passion, or peevishnesse, or list to contradict, or vanity to shew my negative power, shall have any byas upon my judgement, to make Me gratifie my will, by denying any thing which my Reason and Conscience commands Me not.

Nor on the other side, will I consent to more then Reason, Justice, Honour, and Religion perswade Me, to be for Gods glory, and the Churches good, my Peoples welfare, and my own peace.

I will study to satisfie my Parliament, and my People; but I will never, for fear, or flattery, gra-tifie any Faction, how potent soever; for this were to nourish the disease, and oppresse the bodie.

Although many mens loyaltie and prudence are terrified, from giving Me that free and faith-full counsell, which they are able and willing to impart, and I may want; yet none can hinder Me from craving of the counsell of that mighty Counsellour, who can both suggest what is best, and incline my heart stedfastly to follow it.

O thou first and eternall Reason, whose wisdom is fortified with Omnipotency, furnish thy Servant, first with clear discoveries of Truth, Reason, and Justice, in my Understanding; then so confirm my will and resolution to adhere to them, that no terrours, injuries, or oppressions of my enemies, may ever enforce Me against those rules, which thou by them hast planted in my Conscience.

Thou never madest me a King, that I should be lesse then a Man; and not dare to say, Yea, or Nay, as I see cause; which freedome is not denied to the meanest creature, that hath the use of Reason, and libertie of speech.

Shall that be blameable in Me, which is commendable veracity, and constancy in others?

Thou seest, O Lord, with what partiality and injustice, they deny that freedome to Me their KING, which thou hast given to all men; and which themselves pertinaciously challenge to themselves, while they are so tender of the least breach of their priviledges.

To Thee I make my supplication, who canst guide us by an unerring rule, through the perplexed Labyrinths of our own thoughts, and other mens proposals, which I have some cause to suspect, are purposely cast as snares, that by my granting or denying them, I might be more entangled in those difficulties, wherewith they lie in wait to afflict me.

O Lord, make thy way plain before me.

Let not my own sinfull passions cloud, or divert thy sacred suggestions.

Let thy glory be my end; thy word my rule, and then, thy will be done.

I cannot please all, I care not to please some men:
If I may be happy to please Thee, I need not fear whom I displease.

Thou that makest the wisdom of the world foolish-nesse, and takest in their own devices such as are wise in their own conceits, make Me wise by thy Truth, for Thy honour, my Kingdoms generall good, and my own souls salvation, and I shall not much regard the worlds opinion or diminution of Me.

The lesse wisdom they are willing to impute to Me, the more they shall be convinced of thy wisdom directing Me, while I denie nothing fit to be granted, out of crossenesse or humour, nor grant any thing which is to be denied, out of any fear or flattery of men.

Suffer Me not to be guilty, or unhappy, by willing or inconsiderate advancing any mens designs, which are injurious to the publick good, while I confirm them by my consent.

Nor let me be any occasion to hinder or defraud the publick of what is best, by any morose or perverse dissentings.

Make Me so humbly charitable, as to follow their advice, when it appears to be for the Publick good, of whose affections to me, I have yet but few evidences to assure me.

Thou canst as well blesse honest errours, as blast fraudulent counsels.

Since we must give an account of every evil and idle word in private, at thy Tribunall; Lord, make Me care-full of those solemn Declarations of my mind, which are like to have the greatest influence upon the Publick, either for wo or weal.

The

The lesse others consider what they ask, make me the more solicitous what I answer.

Though mine own, and my Peoples pressures are grievous, and peace would be very pleasing; yet, Lord, never suffer Me to avoid the one, or purchase the other, with the least expense or wast of my Conscience; whereof thou, O Lord, onely art deservedly more Master then my self.

12. Upon the Rebellion, and troubles in Ireland.

THe Commotions in Ireland were so sudden, and so violent, that it was hard at first, either to discern the rise, or apply a remedie to that precipitate Rebellion.

Indeed, that sea of bloud which hath there been cruelly and barbarously shed, is enough to drown any man in eternall both infamie and miserie, whom God shall find the malicious Author or Instigatour of its effusion.

It fell out, as a most unhappie advantage to some mens malice against Me; that when they had impudence enough to lay any thing to My charge, this bloody opportunitie should be offered them, with which I must be aspersed. Although there was nothing which could be more abhorred to Me, being so full of sinne against God, disloyaltie to my Self, and destructive to my Subjects.

Some men took it very ill not to be believed, when they affirmed, that what the Irish Rebels did, was done with My privitie (at least) if not by my Commission. But these knew too well, that it is no news for some of my Subjects, to fight, not onely without my Commission, but against my Command, and Person too; yet all the while to pretend, they fight by my Authority, and for my Safety.

I would to God the Irish had nothing to alledge for their imitation against those, whose blame must needs be the greater, by how much Protestant Principles are more against all Rebellion against Princes, then those of Papists. Nor will the goodnesse of mens intentions, excuse the scandal, and contagion of their examples.

But whoever fail of their dutie toward Me, I must bear the blame; this Honour my Enemies have alwayes done Me, to think moderate injuries not proportionate to Me, nor competent trials either of my patience under them, or my pardon of them.

Therefore with exquisite malice they have mixed the gall and vinegar of falsitie and contempt, with the cup of my Affliction; Charging me not onely with untruths, but such as wherein I have the greatest share of losse and dishonour by what is committed; whereby (in all Politie, Reason, and Religion, having least cause to give give the least consent, and most grounds of utter detestation) I might be represented by them to the world, the more inhumane and barbarous: Like some Cyclopick monster, whom nothing will serve to eat and drink, but the flesh and bloud of mine own Subjects; in whose common welfare my interest lies as much as some mens doth in their perturbations: who think they cannot do well, but in evil times; nor so cunningly, as in laying the odium of those sad events on others, wherewith themselves are most pleased, & whereof they have been not the least occasion.

And certainly, 'tis thought by many wise men, that the preposterous rigour, and unreasonable severity, which some men carried before them in England, was not the least incentive, that kindled and blew up into those horrid flames, the sparks of discontent, which wanted not pre-disposed fewell for Rebellion in Ireland; where despair being added to their former discontents, and the fears of utter extirpation to their wonted oppressions, it was easie to provoke to an open Rebellion, a people prone enough, to break out to all exorbitant violence, both by some Principles of their Religion, and the naturall desires of libertie; both to exempt themselves from their present restraints, and to prevent those after rigours, wherewith they saw themselves apparently threatned, by the covetous

- zeal and uncharitable fury of some men, who think it a great Argument of the truth of their Religion, to endure no other but their own.

God knows, as I can with Truth wash my
- hands in Innocencie, as to any guilt in that Rebellion; so I might wash them in my Tears, as to the sad apprehensions I had, to see it spread so farre, and make such waste. And this in a time, when distractions and jealousies here in England,
- made most men rather intent to their own safety, or designs they were driving, then to the relief of those, who were every day inhumanely butchered in Ireland: Whose tears and bloud might, if nothing else, have quenched, or at least for a time, repressed and smothered those sparks of Civill dissentions, and Jealousies, which in England some men most industriously scattered.

I would to God no man had been lesse affected with *Ireland*s sad estate then my Self; I offered to go my Self in Person upon that expedition; But some men were either afraid I should have any one Kingdome quieted; or loth they were to shoot at any mark here lesse then my Self; or that any should have the glory of my destruction but themselves. Had my many offers been accepted, I am confident neither the ruine had been so great, nor the calamitie so long, nor the remedie so desperate.

So

So that next to the sinne of those, who began that Rebellion, theirs must needs be, who either hindered the speedie suppressing of it by Domesticke dissentions, or diverted the Aids, or exasperated the Rebels to the most desperate resolutions and actions, by threatening all extremities, not onely to the known heads, and chief incendiaries, but even to the whole communitie of that Nation; Resolving to destroy Root and Branch, men, women, and children, without any regard to those usuall pleas for mercy, which Conquerours, not wholly barbarous, are wont to hear from their own breasts, in behalf of those, whose oppressive fears, rather than their malice, engaged them; or whose imbecillity for Sex and Age was such, as they could neither lift up a hand against them, nor distinguish between their right hand and their left: Which preposterous and (I think) un-evangelicall Zeal, is too like that of the rebuked Disciples, who would go no lower in their revenge, then to call for fire from heaven upon whole Cities, for the repulse or neglect of a few; or like that of Jacobs sons, which the Father both blamed and cursed: choosing rather to use all extremities, which might drive men to desperate obstinacy, then to apply moderate remedies; such as might punish some with exemplary Justice, yet disannoy others with tenders of mercy upon their submission on, and our protection of them, from the fury of those, who would soon drown them, if they refused to swim down the popular stream with them.

But some kind of zeal counts all mercifull moderation, lukewarmnesse, and had rather be cruel then counted cold; and is not seldome more greedy to kill the Bear for his skin, then for any harm he hath done. The confiscation of mens estates being more beneficiall, then the charitie of saving their lives, or reforming their errours.

When all proportionable succours of the poor Protestants in Ireland (who were daily massacred, and over-born with numbers of now desperate Enemies) was diverted and obstructed here; I was earnestly entreated, and generally advised by the chief of the Protestant party there, to get them some respite and breathing by a cessation, without which they saw no probability (unlesse by miracle) to preserve the remnant that had yet escaped. God knows with how much commiseration and solicitous caution, I carried on that businesse, by persons of Honour and Integrity, that so I might neither incourage the Rebels Insolence, nor discourage the Protestants Loyaltie and Patience.

Yet when this was effected in the best sort, that the necessitie and difficultie of affairs would then permit, I was then to suffer again in my reputation tion and Honour, because I suffered not the Rebels utterly to devour the remaining handfulls of the Protestants there.

I thought, that in all reason, the gaining of that respite could not be so much to the Rebels advantages (which some have highly calumniated against Me) as it might have been for the Protestants future, as well as present safety; If during the time of that Cessation, some men had had the grace to have laid Ireland's sad condition more to heart, and laid aside those violent motions, which were here carried on by those, that had better skill to let bloud, then to stanch it.

But in all the misconstructions of my actions, (which are prone to find more credulitie in men to what is false and evil, then love or charitie to what is true and good) (as I have no Judge but God above Me, so I can have comfort to appeal to his Omniscience, who doth not therefore denie my Innocence, because he is pleased so farre to trie my patience, as he did his servant Jobs).

I have enough to do to look to my own Conscience, and the faithfull discharge of my Trust as a KING; I have scarce leisure to consider those swarms of reproches, which issue out of some mens mouthes and hearts, as easily as smoke, or sparks do out of a fornace: Much lesse, to make such prolix Apologies, as might give those men satisfaction:

satisfaction ; who conscious to their own depth of wickednesse , are loth to believe any man not to be as bad as themselves.

'Tis Kingly to do well, and heare ill : If I can but act the one , I shall not much regard to hear the other.

I thank God, I can heare with patience, as bad as my worst enemies can falsely say. And I hope I shall still do better then they desire , or deserve I should.

I believe, it will at last appear , that they who first began to embroyl my other Kingdoms, are in great part guilty, if not of the first letting out, yet of the not timely stopping those horrid effusions of bloud in Ireland.

Which (whatever my Enemies please to say, or think) I look upon, as that of my other Kingdoms, exhausted out of my own veins ; no man being so much weakened by it , as my Self: And I hope , though mens unsatiable cruelties never will, yet the mercie of God will at length say to his justice, It is enough : and command the Sword of Civil Warres to sheath it self : his mercifull justice intending , I trust not our utter confusion, but our cure: the abatement of our sinnes, not the desolating of these Nations.

O my God , let those infinite mercies prevent us once again , which I and my Kingdoms have formerly abused, abused, and can never deserve, should be restored.

Thou seest how much cruelty among Christians is acted under the colour of Religion; as if we could not be Christians, unlesse we crucifie one another.

Because we have not more loved thy Truth, and practised in charity, thou hast suffered a Spirit of Errour and bitternesse, of mutuall & mortall hatred to rise among us.

O Lord, forgive wherein we have sinned, and sanctifie what we have suffered.

Let our Repentance be our recovery, as our great sins have been our ruine.

Let not the miseries I and my Kingdoms have hitherto suffered, seem small to thee: but make our sins appear to our consciences, as they are represented in the glasse of thy judgements; for thou never punishest small failings with so severe afflictions.

O therefore, according to the multitude of thy great mercies, pardon our sins, and remove thy judgements which are very many, and very heavy.

Yet let our sinnes be ever more grievous to us, then thy judgements; and make us more willing to repent, then to be relieved; first give us the peace of penitent consciences, and then the tranquillitie of united Kingdoms.

In the sea of our Saviours bloud drown our sins; and brough this red sea of our own bloud, bring us at last to a state of pietie, peace and plenty.

As my publick relations to all, make Me share in all my Subjects sufferings; so give Me such a pious sense of hem, as becomes a Christian King, and a loving Father of My people.

Let

Let the scandalous and unjust reproches cast upon Me, be as a breath, more to kindle my compassion; Give Me grace to heap charitable coals of fire upon their heads to melt them, whose malice or cruel Zeal hath kindled, or hindered the quenching of those flames, which have so much wasted my three Kingdoms.

O rescue and assist those poore Protestants in Ireland, whom thou hast hitherto preserved.

And lead those in the wayes of thy saving Truths, whose ignorance or errours have filled them with rebellious and destructive principles; which they act under an opinion, That they do thee good service.

Let the hand of thy justice be against those, who maliciously and despitefully have raised or fomented those cruel and desperate Warres.

Thou that art farre from destroying the Innocent with the Guilty, and the Erroneous with the Malicious; Thou that hadst pity on Nineveh for the many Children that were therein, give not over the whole stock of that populous and seduced Nation, to the wrath of those, whose covetousnesse makes them cruel; nor to their anger, which is too fierce, and therefore justly cursed.

Preserve, if it be thy will, in the midst of the furnace of thy severe justice, a Posteritie, which may praise thee for thy mercy.

And deal with Me, not according to mans unjust reproches, but according to the Innocency of my hands in thy sight.

If I have desired, or delighted in the wofull day of my

my Kingdomes calamities, if I have not earnestly studied, and faithfully endeavoured the preventing and composing of these bloudy distractions; then let thy hand be against Me, and my Fathers house. O Lord, thou seest I have enemies enough of men; as I need not, so I should not dare thus to imprecate thy curse on Me, and Mine, if my Conscience did not witness my integritie, which Thou, O Lord, knowest right well; But I trust not to my own merit, but thy mercies; Spare Me, O Lord, and be not angry with Me for ever.

13. Upon the Calling in of the Scots, and their Coming.

THe Scots are a Nation, upon whom I have not onely common ties of Nature, Sovereigntie, and Bounty, with my Father of blessed memorie; but also speciall and late obligations of favours, having gratified the active Spirits among them so farre, that I seemed to many, to preferre the desires of that party, before my own Interest and Honour. But, I see, Royall bountie emboldens some men to ask and act beyond all bounds of modestie and gratitude.

My charitie, and Act of Pacification, forbids Me to reflect on former passages; wherein I shall never be farre from letting any mans ingratitude, or inconstancie, make Me repent of what I granted them, for the publick good: I pray God it may so prove.

The

The coming again of that partie into England, with an Army, onely to conform this Church to their late new modell, cannot but seem as unreasonable, as they would have thought the same measure offered from hence to themselves.

Other errand I could never understand they had, (besides those common and vulgar flourishes for Religion and Liberty) save onely to confirm the Presbyterian Copie they had set, by making this Church to write after them, though it were in bloudie Characters.

Which designe and end, whether it will justifie the use of such violent means, before the divine Justice, I leave to their Consciences to judge, who have already felt the miserie of the means, but not reaped the benefit of the end, either in this Kingdome, or that.

Such knots and crossenesse of grain being objected here, as will hardly suffer that form which they crie up, as the onely just Reformation, and settling of Government and Discipline in Churches, to go on so smoothly here, as it might do in Scotland, and was by them imagined would have done in England, when so many of the English Clergie, through levitie, or discontent, if no worse passion, suddenly quitted their former engagements to Episcopacie, and faced about to their Presbyterie.

It cannot but seem either passion, or some self-self-seeking, more then true Zeal, and pious Discretion, for any forrein State or Church to prescribe such medicines onely for others, which themselves have used, rather successively then commendably; not considering that the same Physick on different constitutions, will have different operations; That may kill one, which doth but cure another.

Nor do I know any such tough and malignant humours in the constitution of the English Church, which gentler applications then those of an Army, might not easily have removed: Nor is it so proper to hew out religious Reformations by the Sword, as to polish them by fair and equall disputations, among those that are most concerned in the differences, whom not force, but Reason ought to convince.

But their designe now, seemed rather to cut off all disputation here, then to procure a fair and equall one: For, it was concluded there, that the English Clergie must conform to the Scots pattern, before ever they could be heard, what they could say for themselves, or against the others way.

I could have wished fairer proceedings both for their credits, who urge things with such violence; and for other mens Consciences too; who can receive little satisfaction in these points, which are maintained rather by Souldiers fighting in the Field, then Scholars disputing in free and learned Synods.

Sure,

Sure, in matters of Religion, those truths gain
 - most on mens Judgements and Consciences,
 - which are least urged with secular violence,
 - which weakens truth with prejudices; and is un-
 - reasonable to be used, till such means of rationall
 - conviction hath been applied, as leaving no ex-
 - cuse for ignorance, condemns mens obstinacie to deserved penalties.

Which no charity will easily suspect of so many learned and pious Churchmen in England; who being alwayes bred up, and conformable to the Government of Episcopacie, cannot so soon renounce both their former opinion and practise, onely because that partie of the Scots, will needs by force assise a like Party here; either
 - to drive all Ministers, as sheep into the common
 - fold of Presbytery, or destroy them; at least fleece them, by depriving them of the benefit of their Flocks. If the Scots sole Presbyterie were proved to be the onely Institution of Jesus Christ, for all Churches Government; yet I believe it would be hard to prove, that Christ had given those Scots, or any other of my Subjects Commission, by the Sword to set it up in any of my Kingdoms, without my Consent.

What respect and obedience Christ and his Apostles paid to the chief Governours of States where they lived, is very clear in the Gospel; but that he, or they ever commanded to set up such a parity of Presbyters, and in such a way as those Scots endeavour; I think is not very disputable.

If Presbyterie in such a supremacie be an institution of Christ, sure it differs from all others, and is the first and onely point of Christianitie, that was to be planted and watered with so much Christian blood; whose effusions run in a stream so contrary to that of the Primitive planters, both of Christianity and Episcopacie, which was with patient shedding of their own blood, not violent drawing other mens: Sure, there is too much of Man in it, to have much of Christ, none of whose institutions were carried on, or begun with the temptations of Covetousnesse, of Ambition; of both which this is vehemently suspected.

Yet was there never any thing upon the point, which those Scots had by Army or Commissioners to move me with, by their many solemn obtestations, and pious threanings, but onely this; To represent to Me the wonderfull necessitie of setting up their Presbyterie in England, to avoid the further miseries of a War; which some men chiefly on this designe at first had begun, and now further engaged themselves to continue.

What hinders that any Sects, Schismes, or Heresies, if they can get but numbers, strength, and opportunity, may not, according to this opinion and pattern, set up their waies by the like methods of violence? all which Presbyterie seeks to

H

sup

suppresse and render odious under those names; when wise and learned men think, that nothing hath more marks of Schisme, and Sectarisme, then this Presbyterian way, both as to the Ancient, and still most Universall way of the Church-government, and specially as to the particular Laws and Constitutions of this English Church, which are not yet repealed, nor are like to be for Me, till I see more Rationall and Religious motives, then Souldiers use to carry in their Knap-sacks.

But we must leave the successe of all to God, who hath many wayes (having first taken us off from the folly of our opinions, and fury of our passion) to teach us those rules of true Reason, and peaceable Wisdome which is from above, tending most to Gods glory, and his Churches good; which I think my Self so much the more bound in Conscience to attend, with the most judicious zeal and care, by how much I esteem the Church above the State, the glory of Christ above mine Own, and the salvation of mens Souls, above the preservation of their Bodies and Estates.

Nor may any men, I think, without sin and presumption, forcibly endeavour to cast the Churches under my care and tuition, into the moulds they have fancied, and fashioned to their designs, till they first have gained my consent, consent, and resolved both mine Own and other mens Consciences by the strength of their Reasons.

Other violent motions, which are neither Manly, Christian, nor Loyall, shall never either shake or settle my Religion; nor any mans else, who knows what Religion means: And how far it is removed from all Faction, whose proper engine is force; the arbitratour of Beasts, not of reasonable men, much lesse of humble Christians, and loyall Subjects in matters of Religion.

But men are prone to have such high conceits of themselves, that they care not what cost they lay out upon their opinions; especially those that have some temptations of gain, to recompence their losses and hazards.

Yet I was not more scandalized at the Scots Armies coming in against my will, and their forfeiture of so many obligations of duty and gratitude to Me; then I wondred how those here, could so much distrust Gods assistance; who so much pretended Gods cause to the People, as if they had the certainty of some Divine Revelation, considering they were more then competently furnished with my Subjects Arms and Ammunition; my Navie by sea, my Forts, Castles, and Cities by land.

But I find, that men jealous of the just fiab'e-

ness of their doings and designs before God, never think they have humane strength enough to carry their work on, seem it never so plausible to the People; what cannot be justified in Law or Religion, had need be fortified with Power.

And yet such is the inconstancie that attends all - minds engaged in violent motion, that whom some of them one while earnestly invite to come into their assistance; others of them soon after are - weary of, and with nauseating cast them out: what one Party thought to rivet to a settledness by the strength and influence of the Scots, that the other rejects and contemns; at once, despising the Kirk Government, and Discipline of the Scots, and frustrating the success of so chargeable, more then charitable assistance: For, sure the Church of England might have purchased at a far cheaper rate, the truth and happiness of Reformed government and discipline (if it had been wanting) though it had entertained the best Divines of Christendome for their advice, in a full and free Synod; which I was ever willing to, and desirous of, that matters being impartially settled, might be more satisfactorie to all, and more durable.

But much of Gods justice, and mans folly will at length be discovered, through all - the films and pretensions of Religion, in which - Politicians wrap up their designs: In vain do men

men hope to build their piety on the ruins of loyalty. Nor can those confederations or designs be durable, when Subjects make bankrupt of their Allegiance, under pretence of setting up a quicker trade for Religion.

But as my best Subjects of Scotland, never deserted Me, so I cannot think that the most are gone so far from Me, in a prodigalitie of their love and respects toward Me, as to make Me to despair of their return; when besides the bonds of Nature and Conscience, which they have to Me, all Reason and true policy will teach them, that their chiefest interest consists in their fidelity to the Crown, not in their serviceableness to any Party of the People, to a neglect and betraying of My Safetie and Honour for their own advantages: However, the lesse cause I have to trust to men, the more I shall apply My Self to God.

The troubles of My Soul are enlarged; O Lord, bring thou Me out of my distresse.

Lord, direct thy Servant in the wayes of that pious simplicity, which is the best policie.

Deliver Me from the combined strength of those, who have so much of the Serpents subtiltie, that they forget the Doves innocency.

Though hand joyn in hand, yet let them not prevail against my Soul, to the betraying of my Conscience and Honour.

H 3

Thou,

Thou, O Lord, canst turn the hearts of those Parties in both Nations, as thou didst the men of Judah and Israel, to restore David with as much loyal zeal, as they did with inconstancy and eagerness pursue him.

Preserve the love of thy Truth and uprightness in Me, and I shall not despair of my Subjects affections returning towards Me.

Thou canst soon cause the overflowing Seas to ebbe, and retire back again to the bound, which thou hast appointed for them.

O My God, I trust in Thee; let me not be ashamed; let not mine enemies triumph over Me.

Let them be ashamed who transgresse without a cause; let them be turned back that persecute my soul.

Let integrity and uprightness preserve Me, for I wait on Thee, O Lord.

Redeem thy Church, O God, out of all its troubles.

14. Vpon the Covenant.

THe Presbyterian Scots are not to be hired at the ordinary rate of Auxiliaries; nothing will induce them to engage, till those that call them in, have pawned their souls to them, by a Solemne League and Covenant:

Where many engines of religious and fair pretensions are brought chiefly to batter, or rase Episcopacy; This they make the grand evil Spirit,

rit, which, with some other Imps purposely added, to make it more odious and terrible to the vulgar, must by so solemn a charm and exorcisme, be cast out of this Church, after more then a thousand years possession here, from the first plantation of Christianity in this Island, and an universall prescription of time and practise in all other Churches since the Apostles times, till this last Century.

But no Antiquitie must plead for it, Presbyterie, like a young Heir, thinks the Father hath lived long enough, and impatient not to be in the Bishops Chair and Authority (though Lay-men go away with the Revenues) all art is used to sink Episcopacy, and lanch Presbyterie in England; which was lately boyed up in Scotland, by the like artifice of a Covenant.

Although I am unsatisfied with many passages in that Covenant (some referring to my Self with very dubious and dangerous limitations) yet I chiefly wonder at the designe and drift touching the Discipline and Government of the Church; and such a manner of carrying them on to new wayes, by Oaths and Covenants, where it is hard for men to be engaged by no lesse, then swearing for, or against those things, which are of no clear morall necessity; but very disputable and controverted among learned and godly men, whereto the application of Oaths can hardly be made and enjoined with that judgement and certainty in ones self, or that charitie and candour to others of different opinion, as I think Religion requires, which never refuses fair and equable deliberations; yea, and dissentings too, in matters onely probable.

The enjoyning of Oaths upon People, must needs (in things doubtfull) be dangerous; as in things unlawfull, damnable; and no lesse superfluous, where former religious and legall engagements, bound men sufficiently to all necessary duties. Nor can I see how they will reconcile such an Innovating Oath and Covenant, with that former Protestation which was so lately taken, to maintain the Religion established in the Church of England; since they count Discipline so great a part of Religion.

But ambitious minds never think they have laid snares and ginnes enough to catch and hold the Vulgar credulitie: for by such politick and seemingly pious stratagems, they think to keep the populacie fast to their Parties under the terror of perjury. Whereas certainly all honest and wisemen, ever thought themselves sufficiently bound by former ties of Religion, Allegiance, and Laws to God and man.

Nor can such after-Contracts, devised and imposed by a few men in a declared Partie, without my consent, and without any like power

power or president from Gods or mans laws, be ever thought by judicious men, sufficient either to absolve or slacken those morall and eternall bonds of duty, which lie upon all my Subjects consciences both to God and Me.

Yet as things now stand, good men shall least offend God or Me, by keeping their Covenant in honest and lawfull wayes; since I have the charitie to think, that the chief end of the Covenant in such mens intentions, was, to preserve Religion in purity, and the Kingdoms in peace: To other then such ends and means they cannot think themselves engaged; nor will those that have any true touches of Conscience endeavour to carry on the best designes, (much lesse such as are, and will be daily more apparently factious and ambitious) by any unlawfull means, under that title of the Covenant: unlesse they dare preferre ambiguous, dangerous, and un-authorized novelties, before their known and sworn duties, which are indispensable, both to God and My self.

I am prone to believe and hope, That many who took the Covenant, are yet firm to this judgement, That such later Vows, Oaths, or Leagues, can never blot out those former gravings, and characters, which by just and lawfull Oaths were made upon their Souls.

That which makes such Confederations by way of solemn Leagues and Covenants more to be be suspected, is, That they are the common road, used in all factions and powerfull perturbations of State or Church: Where formalities of extraordinary zeal and pietie are never more studied and elaborate, then when Politicians most agitate desperate designs against all that is settled, or sacred in Religion, and Laws, which by such scrues are cunningly, yet forcibly wrested by secret steps, and lesse sensible degrees, from their known rule and wonted practice, to comply with the humours of those men, who aim to subdue all to their own will and power, under the disguises of Holy Combinations.

Which cords and wythes will hold mens Consciences no longer, then force attends and twists them: for every man soon grows his own Pope, & easily absolves himself of those ties, which, not the commands of Gods word, or the Laws of the Land, but onely the subtilty and terrour of a party casts upon him; either superfluous and vain, when they were sufficiently tied before, or fraudulent and injurious, if by such after ligaments they find the Imposers really aiming to dissolve, or suspend their former just, and necessary obligations.

Indeed, such illegall wayes seldome, or never, intend the engaging men more to duties, but onely to Parties; therefore it is not regarded how they keep their Covenants in point of piety pretended, provided they adhere firmly to the Party and Designe intended.

I see the Imposers of it are content to make their Covenant like Manna (not that it came from Heaven, as this did) agreeable to every mans palate and relish, who will but swallow it: They admit any mens senses of it, though diverse or contrary, with any salvoes, cautions, and reservations, so as they crosse not the chief Designe which is laid against the Church, and Me.

It is enough, if they get but the reputation of a seeming increase to their Party: So little do men remember that God is not mocked.

In such latitudes of sense, I believe many that love Me, and the Church well, may have taken the Covenant, who yet are not so fondly and superstitiously taken by it, as now to act clearly against both all pietie and loyaltie: who first yielded to it, more to prevent that imminent violence and ruine, which hung over their heads in case they wholly refused it, then for any value of it, or devotion to it.

Wherein, the latitude of some generall Clauses may (perhaps) serve somewhat to relieve them, as of Doing and endeavouring what lawfully they may, in their Places and Callings; and, according to the Word of God: for, these (indeed) carrie no man beyond those bounds of good Conscience which are certain and fixed, either in Gods Laws, as to the generall; or the Laws of the State and Kingdome, as to the particular ticular regulation and exercise of mens duties.

I would to God, such as glory most in the name of Covenanters, would keep themselves within those lawfull bounds, to which God hath called them: Surely it were the best way to expiate the rashnesse of taking it: which must needs then appear, when besides the want of a full and lawfull Authoritie at first to enjoyn it, it shall actually be carried on beyond and against those ends which were in it specified and pretended. I willingly forgive such mens taking the Covenant, who keep it within such bounds of Pietie, Law, and Loyaltie, as can never hurt either the Church, My self, or the Publick Peace: Against which, no mans lawfull Calling can engage him.

As for that Reformation of the Church, which the Covenant pretends, I cannot think it just or comely, that by the partiall advice of a few Divines, (of so soft and servile tempers, as disposed them to so sudden acting and compliance, contrary to their former judgements, profession, and practice) such foul scandals and suspicions should be cast upon the Doctrine and Government of the Church of England, as was never done (that I have heard) by any that deserved the name of Reformed Churches abroad, nor by any men of learning and candour at home: all whose judgements I cannot but preferre before any mens now factiously engaged.

No

No man can be more forward then my self to carrie on all due Reformations, with mature judgement, and a good Conscience, in what things I shall (after impartiall advice) be, by Gods Word, and right reason, convinced to be amisse. I have offered more then ever the fullest, freest, and wisest Parliaments did desire.

But the sequele of some mens actions makes it evident, that the main Reformation intended, is the abasing of Episcopacie into Presbyterie, and the robbing the Church of its Lands and Revenues: For, no men have been more injuriously used, as to their legall Rights, then the Bishops, and Church-men. These, as the fattest Dear, must be destroyed; the other Rascal-herd of Schismes, Heresies, &c. being lean, may enjoy the benefit of a Toleration: Thus Naboths Vineyard made him the onely blasphemer of his Citie, and fit to die. Still I see, while the breath of Religion fills the Sails, Profit is the Compasse, by which Factionous men steer their course in all seditious Commotions.

I thank God, as no man lay more open to the sacrilegious temptation of usurping the Churches Lands, and Revenues, (which issuing chiefly from the Crown, are held of it, and legally can rivert onely to the Crown with my Consent) so I have alwayes had such a perfect abhorrence of it in My Soul, that I never found the least

least inclination to such sacrilegious Reformings: yet no man hath a greater desire to have Bishops, and all Church-men so reformed, that they may best deserve and use, not onely what the pious munificence of My Predecessours hath given to God and the Church, but all other addition of Christian bountie.

But no necessitie shall ever, I hope, drive Me or Mine to invade or sell the Priests Lands, which both Pharaohs divinitie, and Josephs true piety abhorred to do: So unjust I think it both in the eye of Reason and Religion, to deprive the most sacred employment of all due encouragements; and like that other hard-hearted Pharaoh, to withdraw the Straw, and increase the Task; so pursuing the oppressed Church, as some have done, to the red sea of a Civil Warre, where nothing but a miracle can save either It, or Him, who esteems it His greatest Title to be called, and His chiefest glory to be The Defender of the Church, both in its true Faith, and its just fruitions; equally abhorring Sacriledge, and Apostacy.

I had rather live as my Predecessour Henry 3. sometime did, on the Churches Alms, then violently to take the bread out of Bishops and Ministers mouthes.

The next work will be Jeroboams reformation, consecrating the meanest of the People to be Priests in Israel, to serve those golden Calves who who have enriched themselves with the Churches Patrimonie and Dowrie; which how it thrived both with Prince, Priests, and People, is well enough known: And so it will be here, when from the tuition of Kings and Queens, which have been nursing Fathers and Mothers of this Church, it shall be at their allowance, who have already discovered, what hard Fathers and Step-mothers they will be.

If the povertie of Scotland might, yet the plentie of England, cannot excuse the envie and rapine of the Churches Rights and Revenues.

I cannot so much as pray God to prevent those sad consequences, which will inevitably follow the parity and poverty of Ministers, both in Church and State; since I think it no lesse then a mocking and tempting of God, to desire him to hinder those mischiefs, whose occasions and remedies are in our own power; it being every mans sin not to avoid the one, and not to use the other.

There are wayes enough to repair the breaches of the State, without the ruines of the Church; as I would be a Restorer of the one, so I would not be an Oppressour of the other, under the pretence of Publick Debts: The occasions contracting them were bad enough, but such a discharging of them would be much worse; I pray God, neither I nor Mine, may be necessary to either.

To thee, O Lord, do I addresse My prayer, beseeching Thee to pardon the rashnesse of My Subjects Swearings, and to quicken their sense and observation of those just, morall, and indispensable bonds, which thy Word, and the Laws of this Kingdome have laid upon their Consciences; From which no pretensions of Piety and Reformation are sufficient to absolve them; or to engage them to any contrary practises.

Make them at length seriously to consider, that nothing violent and injurious can be religious.

Thou allowest no mans committing Sacriledge under the Zeal of abhorring Idols.

Suffer not sacrilegious designs to have the countenance of religious ties.

Thou hast taught us by the wisest of Kings, that it is a snare to take things that are holy, and after Vows to make enquiry.

Ever keep thy Servant from consenting to perjurious and sacrilegious rapines, that I may not have the brand and curse to all posterity, of robbing Thee and thy Church, of what thy bounty hath given us, and thy clemency hath accepted from us, wherewith to encourage Learning and Religion.

Though My Treasures are exhausted, My Revenues diminished, and My Debts encreased; yet never suffer Me to be tempted to use such profane Reparations; lest a coal from thine Altar set such a fire on My Throne and Conscience; as will be hardly quenched.

Let not the Debts and Engagements of the Publick,
which

which some mens folly and prodigality hath contracted, be an occasion to impoverish thy Church.

The State may soon recover, by thy blessing of peace upon us; The Church is never likely, in times where the Charitie of most men is grown so cold, and their Religion so illiberall.

Continue to those that serve Thee and thy Church all those encouragements, which by the will of the pious Donours, and the justice of the Lawes are due unto them; and give them grace to deserve & use them aright to thy glory, and the relief of the poor: That thy Priests may be clothed with righteousness, and the poor may be satisfied with bread.

Let not holy things be given to Swine; nor the Churches bread to Dogs; rather let them go about the City, gryn like a Dog, and grudge that they are not satisfied.

Let those sacred morsels, which some men have already by violence devoured, never digest with them, nor be theirs: Let them be as Naboth's vineyard to Ahab, gall in their mouths, rottennesse to their names, a moth to their Families, and a sting to their Consciences.

Break in sunder, O Lord, all violent and sacrilegious Confederations, to do wickedly and injuriously.

Divide their hearts and tongues, who have bandied together against the Church and State, that the folly of such may be manifest to all men, and proceed no further.

But so favour my righteous dealing, O Lord, that in the mercies of Thee, the most High, I may never misarry.

15. Upon the many Jealousies raised, and Scandals cast upon the King, to stirre up the People against him.

IF I had not Mine own Innocencie, and Gods protection, it were hard for Me to stand out against those stratagems and conflicts of malice, which by Falsities seek to oppresse the Truth; and by Jealousies to supply the defect of Reall causes, which might seem to justifie so unjust engagements against Me.

And indeed, the worst effects of open hostilitie, come short of these designs: For, I can more willingly lose my Crowns, then my Credit; nor are my Kingdoms so dear to Me, as my Reputation and Honour.

Those must have a period with my life, but these may survive to a glorious kind of Immortality, when I am dead and gone: A good Name being the embalming of Princes, and a sweet consecrating of them to an Eternity of love and gratitude among Posterity.

Those foul and false aspersions were secret engins at first employed against My peoples love of Me; that undermining their opinion and value of Me, My enemies, and theirs too, might at once blow up their affections, and batter down their loyaltie.

Wherein

Wherein yet, I thank God, the detriment of my Honour is not so afflictive to Me, as the sinne and danger of my peoples souls, whose eyes once blinded with such mysts of suspicions, they are soon misled into the most desperate precipices of actions: wherein they do not onely not consider their sinne and danger, but glory in their zealous adventures; while I am rendred to them so fit to be destroyed, that many are ambitious to merit the name of My Destroyers; Imagining they then fear God most, when they least honour their King.

I thank God, I never found but my pity was above my anger; nor have my passions ever so prevailed against Me, as to exclude my most compassionate prayers for them, whom devout errors, more then their own malice, have betrayed to a most religious Rebellion.

I had the Charity to interpret, that most part of my Subjects, fought against my supposed Errours, not my Person; and intended to mend Me, not to end Me: And I hope, that God pardoning their Errours, hath so farre accepted and answered their good intentions, that as he hath yet preserved Me, so he hath by these afflictions prepared Me, both to do him better service, and my People more good, then hitherto I have done.

I do not more willingly forgive their seductions, which occasioned their L. yall injuries, then I am ambitious by all Princely merits to redeem them from their unjust suspicions, and reward them for their good intentions.

I am too conscious to mine own Affections toward the generality of my people, to suspect theirs to Me; nor shall the malice of mine enemies ever be able to deprive Me of the comfort, which that confidence gives Me: I shall never gratifie the spightfulnesse of a few, with any sinister thoughts of all their Allegiance, whom pious frauds have seduced.

The worst some mens ambition can do, shall never perswade Me, to make so bad interpretations of most of My Subjects actions; who possibly may be Erroneous, but not Heretical in point of Loyaltie.

The sense of the injuries done to My Subjects is as sharp, as those done to My Self; our welfares being inseparable; in this onely they suffer more then My Self, that they are animated by some seducers, to injure at once both themselves and Me.

For this is not enough to the malice of My enemies, that I be afflicted; but it must be done by such instruments, that My afflictions grieve Me not more then this doth, that I am afflicted by those, whose prosperity I earnestly desire, and whose seduction I heartily deplore.

If they had been mine open and forrein enemies

mies, I could have born it; but they must be my own Subjects, who are next to my Children, dear to Me: And for the restoring of whose tranquillitie, I could willingly be the Jonah, if I did not evidently foresee, that by the divided Interests of their and mine enemies, as by contrary winds, the storm of their miseries would be rather encreased then allayed.

I had rather prevent my Peoples ruine, then rule over them; nor am I so ambitious of that Dominion which is but my Right, as of their happinesse; if it could expiate, or countervail such a way of obtaining it, by the highest injuries of Subjects committed against their Sovereign.

Yet I had rather suffer all the miseries of life, and die many deaths, then shamefully to desert, or dishonourably to betray mine own just Rights and Sovereignty; thereby to gratifie the ambition, or justifie the malice of mine enemies; between whose malice, and other mens mistakes, I put as great a difference, as between an ordina-Ague and the Plague; or the Itch of Novelty, and the Leprosie of Disloyalty.

As Liars need have good memories, so Malicious persons need good inventions; that their calumnies may fit every mans fancie; and what their reproches want of truth, they may make up with number and shew.

My patience (I thank God) will better serve Me to bear, and my charity to forgive, then my leisure to answer the many false aspersions which some men have cast upon Me.

Did I not more consider my Subjects satisfaction, then mine own Vindication, I should never have given the malice of some men that pleasure, as to see Me take notice of, or remember what they say, or object.

I would leave the Authours to be punished by their own evil manners, and seared Consciences, which will, I believe, in a shorter time then they be aware of, both confute and revenge all those black and false Scandals, which they have cast on Me: And make the world see, there is as little truth in them, as there was little worth in the boasting of them, or Civilitie (I need not say loyalty) in the not suppressing of them; whole credit and reputation, even with the people, shall ere long be quite blasted, by the breath of that same furnace of popular obloquy, and detraction, which they have studied to heat and inflame to the highest degree of infamie, and wherein they have sought to cast and consume my Name and Honour.

First, nothing gave Me more cause to suspect, and search my own Innocency; then when I observed so many forward to engage against Me, who had made great professions of singular piety:

tie: For this gave to vulgar minds so bad reflection upon Me, and my cause, as if it had been impossible to adhere to Me, and not withall depart from God; to think or speak well of Me, and not to blaspheme Him; so many were perswaded that these two were utterly inconsistent, to be at once Loyall to Me, and truly Religious toward God.

Not but that I had (I thank God) many with Me, which were both Learned and Religious, (much above that ordinary size, and that vulgar proportion, wherein some men glory so much) who were so well satisfied in the cause of my sufferings, that they chose rather to suffer with Me, then forsake Me.

Nor is it strange that so religious Pretensions as were used against Me, should be to many well-minded men a great temptation to oppose Me: Especially, being urged by such popular Preachers, as think it no sinne to lie for God, and what they please to call Gods cause, cursing all that will not curse with them; looking so much at, and crying up the goodnesse of the end propounded, that they consider not the lawfulnessse of the means used, nor the depth of the mischief, chiefly plotted and intended.

The weaknesse of these mens judgements, must be made up by their clamours and activity.

It was a great part of some mens Religion, to scandalize Me and mine; they thought theirs could not be true, if they cried not down mine as false.

I thank God, I have had more triall of his grace, as to the constancy of my Religion in the Protestant profession of the Church of England, both abroad and at home, then ever they are like to have.

Nor do I know any exception, I am so liable to, in their opinion, as too great a fixednesse in that Religion, whose judicious and solid grounds, both from Scripture and Antiquitie, will not give my Conscience leave to approve or consent to those many dangerous and divided Innovations, which the bold ignorance of some men would needs obtrude upon Me, and my People.

Contrary to those well-tried foundations both of Truth and Order, which men of farre greater Learning, and clearer Zeal, have settled in the Confession and Constitution of this Church in England, which many former Parliaments in the most calm and unpassionate times, have oft confirmed: In which I shall ever, by Gods help, persevere, as believing it hath most of Primitive Truth and Order.

Nor did my using the assistance of some Papists, which were my Subjects, any way fight against my Religion, as some men would needs inter-interpret it : especially those, who least of all men valued whom they employed , or what they said, and did, so they might prevail.

'Tis strange, that so wise men, as they would be esteemed, should not conceive, That differences of perswasion in matters of Religion may easily fall out , where there is the sameness of duty, Allegiance, and subjection. The first they own as men, and Christians to God ; the second, they owe to Me in Common, as their KING; different professions in point of Religion cannot (any more then in civil Trades) take away the communitie of relations either to Parents, or to Princes: And where is there such an Ooglio, or medley of various Religions in the world again , as those men entertain in their service , (who find most fault with Me) without any scruple, as to the diversitie of their Sects and Opinions?

It was indeed, a foul and indelible shame, for such as would be counted Protestants, to enforce Me, a declared Protestant, their Lord and King, to a necessary use of Papists, or any other, who did out their dutie to help Me to defend My Self.

Nor did I more then is lawfull for any King , in such exigents , to use the aid of any his Subjects.

I am sorrie the Papists should have a greater sense of their Allegiance, then many Protestant Professours; who seem to have learned, and to practise

etise the worst Principles of the worst Papists.

Indeed, it had been a very impertinent and unseasonable scruple in Me, (and very pleasing no doubt to My Enemies) to have been then disputing the points of different beliefs in My Subjects, when I was disputed with by Swords points : and when I needed the help of My Subjects as men, no lesse then their prayers as Christians.

The noise of My Evil Counsellours was another usefull device for those, who were impatient any mens counsels but their own should be followed in Church or State; who were so eager in giving Me better counsell, that they would not give Me leave to take it with freedom, as a Man, or honour, as a King ; making their counsels more like a drench that must be poured down, then a draught which might be fairly and leisurely drank, if I liked it.

I will not justifie beyond humane errours and frailties My Self, or My Counsellours: They might be subject to some miscarriages, yet such as were farre more reparable by second and better thoughts, then those enormous extravagancies, wherewith some men have now even wildred, and almost quite lost both Church and State.

The event of things at last will make it evident to my Subjects, that had I followed the worst worst Counsels, that My worst Counsellours ever had the boldnesse to offer to Me, or My Self any inclination to use; I could not so soon have brought both Church and State in three flourishing Kingdomes, to such a Chaos of confusions and Hell of miseries, as some have done; out of which they cannot, or will not in the midst of their many great advantages, redeem either Me or my Subjects.

No men were more willing to complain, then I was to redresse what I saw in Reason was either done or advised amisse; and this I thought I had done, even beyond the expectation of moderate men: who were sorrie to see Me prone even to injure my Self, out of a Zeal to relieve my Subjects.

But other mens insatiable desire of revenge upon Me, my Court, and my Clergie, hath wholly beguiled both Church and State, of the benefit of all my either Retractations or Concessions; and withall, hath deprived all those (now so zealous Persecutours) both of the comfort and reward of their former pretended persecutions, wherein they so much gloried among the vulgar, and which indeed, a truly humble Christian will so highly prize, as rather not to be relieved, then be revenged, so as to be bereaved of that Crown of Christian patience, which attends humble and injured sufferers.

[Another

Another artifice used to withdraw my peoples affections from Me to their designs, was the noise and ostentation of libertie, which men are not more prone to desire, then unapt to bear in the popular sense, which is, To do what every man liketh best.

If the Divineſt libertie be to will what men should, and to do what they ſo will according to Reason, Laws, and Religion; I envie not my Subjects that libertie, which is all I deſire to enjoy my Self; So farre am I from the deſire of oppreſſing theirs: Nor were thoſe Lords and Gentlemen which aſſiſted Me, ſo prodigall of their liberties, as with their Lives and Fortunes to help on the enſlaving of themſelves & their poſterities.

As to Civil Immunities, none but ſuch as deſire to drive on their Ambitious and covetous designs over the ruines of Church and State, Prince, Peers, and People, will ever deſire greater Freedomes then the Laws allow, whoſe bounds good man count their Ornament and protection, others theirs Manacles and Oppreſſion.

Nor is it juſt any man ſhould expect the reward and benefit of the Law, who deſpiſeth his rule and direction, loſing juſtly his ſafety while he ſeeks an unreaſonable libertie.

Time will beſt inform my Subjects that thoſe are the beſt preſervers of their true liberties, who who allow themselves the least licentiousness against or beyond the Laws.

They will feel it at last to their cost, that it is impossible those men should be really tender of their fellow-subjects liberties, who have the hardness to use their King with so severe restraints, against all Laws both Divine and Humane: under which, yet, I will rather perish, then complain to those, who want nothing to complete their mirth and triumph, but such musick.

In point of true conscientious tenderness (attended with humilitie and meekness, not with proud and arrogant activitie, which seeks to hatch every egge of different opinion to a Faction or Schisme) I have oft declared, how little I desire my Lawes and Sceptre should intrench on Gods Sovereignty, which is the onely King of mens Consciences; and yet he hath laid such restraints upon men, as commands them to be subject for Conscience sake, giving no men libertie to break the Law established, further then with meekness and patience, they are content to suffer the penalties annexed, rather then perturb the publick Peace.

The truth is, some mens thirst after Novelties, others despair to relieve the necessities of their Fortunes, or satisfy their Ambition in peaceable times, (distrusting Gods providence, as well as their own merits) were the secret (but principall)
impulsives

impulsives to these popular Commotions; by which Subjects have been perswaded to expend much of those plentiful Estates they got, and enjoyed under My Government, in peaceable times; which yet must now be blasted with all the odious reproches, which impudent malice can invent; and My self exposed to all those contempts, which may most diminish the Majestie of a King, and increase the ungratefull insolencies of my People.

For mine Honour, I am well assured, that as mine Innocency is clear before God, in point of any calumnies they object; so My reputation shall like the Sun (after Owls and Bats have had their freedome in the night and darker times) rise and recover it self to such a degree of splendour, as those serall birds shall be grieved to behold, and unable to bear. For never were any Princes more glorious, then those whom God hath suffered to be tried in the furnace of afflictions by their injurious Subjects.

And who knows but the just and mercifull God will do me good, for some mens hard, false, and evil speeches against Me; wherein they speak rather what they wish, then what they believe, or know.

Nor can I suffer so much in point of Honour, by those rude and scandalous Pamphlets (which like fire in great conflagrations, rise up and down to set all places on like flames) as those men do, who pretending to so much pietie, are so forgetfull of their dutie to God and Me : By no way ever vindicating the Majestie of their KING against any of those, who contrary to the precept of God , and president of Angels , speake vil of dignities , and bring railing accusations against those, who are honoured with the name of Gods.
and

But 'tis no wonder if men not fearing God, should not Honour their KING.

They will easily contemn such shadows of God, who reverence not that Supreme, and adorable Majesty, in comparison of whom all the glorie of Men and Angels is but obscuritie; yet hath he graven such Characters of divine Authority, and Sacred power upon Kings , as none may without sin seek to blot them out. Nor shall their black veils be able to hide the shining of My face, while God gives Me a heart frequently and humbly to converse with him, from whom alone are all the irradiations of true glory and Majestie.

Thou, O Lord, knowest My reproch, and My dishonour, My Adversaries are all before Thee.

My Soul is among Lions, among them that are set on fire, even the Sons of Men; whose teeth are spears and arrows; their tongue a sharp sword.

Mine enemies reproch Me all the day long, and those that are mad against Me are sworn together.

O My God, how long shall the sonnes of men turn My glory into shame? how long shall they love vanity, and seek after lies?

Thou hast heard the reproches of wicked men on every side. Hold not thy peace, lest My Enemies prevail against Me, and lay mine Honour in the dust.

Thou, O Lord, shalt destroy them that speak lies; The Lord will abhor both the bloud-thirsty, and deceitfull men.

Make my righteousness to appear as the light, and mine innocency to shine forth as the Sun at noon day.

Suffer not my silence to betray mine innocence, nor my displeasure, my patience; That after my Saviours example, being reviled, I may not revile again; and being cursed by them, I may blesse them.

Thou that wouldst not suffer Shimei's tongue to go unpunished; when by thy judgements on David, he might seem to justifie his disdainfull reproches, give Me grace to intercede with thy mercy for these my enemies, that the reward of false and lying tongues, even hot burning coals of eternall fire, may not be brought upon them.

Let my prayers, and patience, be as water to cool and quench their tongues, who are already set on fire with the fire of Hell, and tormented with those malicious flames.

Let Me be happy to refute, and put to silence their evil-speaking by well-doing; and let them enjoy not the fruits of their lips, but of my prayer for their repentance, and thy pardon.

Teach me Davids patience and Hezekiahs devotion, that I may look to thy mercy through mans malice, and see thy justice in their sin. Let Let Sheba's seditious speeches, Rabshekahs rayling, and Shimei's cursing, provoke, as my humble prayer to Thee, so thy renewed blessing toward Me.

Though they curse, do Thou blesse, and I shall be blessed, and made a blessing to my People:

That the stone, which some builders refuse, may become the head stone of the corner.

Look down from heaven, and save Me from the reproch of them that would swallow Me up.

Hide Me in the secret of thy presence, from the pride of man, and keep Me from the strife of tongues.

16. Upon the Ordinance against the Common-Prayer-Book.

IT is no news, to have all Innovations ushered in with the name of Reformations in Church and State, by those, who seeking to gain reputation with the Vulgar for their extraordinary parts and piety, must needs undo whatever was formerly settled never so well and wisely.

So hardly can the pride of those that study Novelties, allow former times any share or degree of wisdom or godlinesse.

And because matter of prayer and devotion to God, justly bears a great part in Religion, (being the Souls more immediate converse with the Divine Majesty) nothing could be more plausible to the People, then to tell them, They served God amisse in that point.

K Hence

Hence our publick Liturgie, or Forms of constant Prayers, must be (not amended, in what upon free and publick advice might seem to sober men inconvenient for matter or manner, to which I should easily consent, but) wholly cashiered, and abolished, and after many popular contempts offered to the Book, and those that used it according to their Consciences, and the Laws in force , it must be crucified by an Ordinance, the better to please either those men, who gloried in their extemporary vein and fluencie; or others, who conscious to their own formality in the use of it, thought they fully expiated their sinne of not using it aright, by laying all the blame upon it, and a totall rejection of it as a dead letter, thereby to excuse the deadnes of their hearts

As for the matter contained in the Book, sober and learned men have sufficiently vindicated it against the cavils and exceptions of those, who thought it a part of piety, to make what profane objections they could against it, especially for Popery and Superstition; whereas, no doubt, the Liturgy was exactly conformed to the doctrine of the Church of England; and this by all Reformed Churches, is confessed to be most sound and Orthodox.

For the manner of using set and prescribed Forms, there is no doubt, but that wholesome words being known and fitted to mens understanding standings, are soonest received into their hearts, and aptest to excite and carry along with them judicious and fervent affections.

Nor do I see any reason why Christians should be weary of a wel-composed Liturgie (as I hold this to be) more then of all other things, wherein the Constancie abates nothing of the excellencie and usefulness.

I could never see any Reason, why any Christian should abhor, or be forbidden to use the same Forms of Prayer, since he prayes to the same God, believes in the same Saviour, professeth the same Truths, reads the same Scriptures, hath the same duties upon him, and feels the same daily wants for the most part, both inward and outward, which are common to the whole Church.

Sure, we may as well beforehand know what we pray, as to whom we pray, and in what words, as to what sense; when we desire the same things, what hinders we may not use the same words? Our appetite and digestion too may be good when we use, as we pray for, our daily bread.

Some men, I hear, are so impatient, not to use in all their devotions their own invention and gifts, that they not onely disuse (as too many) but wholly cast away and contemn the Lords Prayer; whose great guilt is, that it is the warrant and originall pattern of all set Liturgies in the Christian Church.

I ever thought that the proud ostentation of mens abilities for invention, and the vain affectations of variety for expressions, in Publick prayer, or any sacred administrations, merits a greater brand of sinne, then that which they call Coldnesse and Barrennesse: Nor are men in those novelties lesse subject to formall and superficiall tempers, (as to their hearts) then in the use of constant Forms, where not the words, but mens hearts are too blame.

I make no doubt, but a man may be very formall in the most extemporary variety; and very fervently devout in the most wonted expressions: Nor is God more a God of variety, then of constancy: Nor are constant Forms of Prayers more likely to flat, and hinder the Spirit of prayer and devotion, then unpremeditated and confused variety to distract and lose it.

Though I am not against a grave, modest, discreet, and humble use of Ministers gifts, even in publick, the better to fit, and excite their own, and the Peoples affections to the present occasions; yet I know no necessity why private and single abilities should quite juttle out, and deprive the Church of the joynt abilities and concurrent gifts of many learned and godly men, such as the Composers of the Service-Book were who may in all reason be thought to have more of gifts and graces enabling them to compose with

with serious deliberation and concurrent advice, such Forms of Prayers, as may best fit the Churches common wants, inform the Hearers understanding, and stirre up that fiduciary and fervent application of their spirits, (wherein consists the very life and soul of prayer, and that so much pretended Spirit of Prayer;) then any private man by his solitary abilities can be presumed to have; which, what they are many times (even there, where they make a great noise and shew) the affectations, emptinesse, impertinency, rudenesse, confusions, flatnesse, levity, obscurity, vain and ridiculous repetitions, the senselesse and oftentimes blasphemous expressions; all these burthened with a most tedious and intolerable length, do sufficiently convince all men, but those who glory in that Pharisaick way,

Wherein men must be strangely impudent, and flatterers of themselves, not to have an infinite shame of what they so do and say, in things of so sacred a nature, before God and the Church, after so ridiculous, and indeed profane a manner.

Nor can it be expected, but that in duties of frequent performance, as Sacramentall administrations, and the like, which are still the same; Ministers must either come to use their own Forms constantly, which are not like to be so sound, or comprehensive of the nature of the duty, as Forms of Publick composition; or else they must every time affect new expressions when the subject is the same; which can hardly be presumed in any mans greatest sufficiencies, not to want (many times) much of that compleatnesse, order, and gravitie becoming those duties; which by this means are exposed at every celebration to every Ministers private infirmities, indispositions, errours, disorders, and defects, both for judgement and expression.

A serious sense of which inconveniences in the Church, unavoidably following every mans severall manner of officiating, no doubt, first occasioned the wisdom and piety of the Ancient Churches, to remedy those mischiefs, by the use of constant Liturgies of Publick composure.

The want of which, I believe, this Church will sufficiently feel, when the unhappy fruits of many mens ungoverned ignorance, and confident defects, shall be discovered in more errours, schismes, disorders, and uncharitable distractions in Religion, which are already but too many, the more is the pity.

However, if violence must needs bring in, and abett those Innovations (that men may not seem to have nothing to do) which Law, Reason, and Religion forbids, at least to be so obtruded, as wholly to juttle out the Publick Liturgie:

Yet nothing can excuse that most unjust and partiall severitie of those men, who either lately had had subscribed to, used, and maintained the Service-book; or refusing to use it, cried out of the rigour of the Laws, and Bishops, which suffered them not to use the liberty of their Consciences, in not using it.

That these men (I say) should so suddenly change the Liturgie into a Directory, as if the Spirit needed help for invention, though not for expressions; or as if matter prescribed, did not as much stint and obstruct the Spirit, as if it were clothed in, and confined to fit words: (So slight and easie is that Legerdemain, which will serve to delude the vulgar.)

That further, they should use such severity, as not to suffer without penaltie, any to use the Common prayer book publickly, although their Consciences bind them to it, as a duty of Pietie to God, and Obedience to the Laws.

Thus I see, no men are prone to be greater Tyrants, and more rigorous exactors upon others, to conform to their illegall novelties; then such, whose pride was formerly least disposed to the obedience of lawfull Constitutions, and whose licentious humours most pretended Conscientious liberties: which freedome with much regret they now allow to Me, and my Chaplains, when they may have leave to serve Me, whose abilities even in their extemporary way, comes not short of the others; but their modesty and learning far exceeds the most of them.

But

But this matter is of so popular a nature, as some men knew it would not bear learned and sober debates, least being convinced by the evidence of Reason, as well as Laws, they should have been driven either to sin more against their knowledge, by taking away the Liturgie, or to displease some Faction of the people, by continuing the use of it.

Though I believe they have offended more considerable men, not onely for their numbers and estates; bur for their weighty and judicious piety, then those are, whose weaknesse or giddinesse they sought to gratifie, by taking it away.

One of the greatest faults some men found with the Common-Prayer Book, I believe, was this, That it taught them to pray so oft for Me; to which Petitions they had not Loyaltie enough to say Amen, nor yet Charitie enough to forbear Reproches, and even cursings of Me in their own forms, in stead of praying for Me.

I wish their Repentance may be their onely punishment, that seeing the mischiefs which the disuse of publick Liturgies hath already produced, they may restore that credit, use, and reverence to them, which by the ancient Churches were given to set Forms of sound and wholesome words.

And

And Thou, O Lord, which art the same God, blessed for ever: whose mercies are full of variety, and yet of constancy; Thou deniest us not a new and fresh sense of our old and dayly wants; nor despisest renewed affections joyned to constant expressions.

Let us not want the benefit of thy Churches united and well-advised Devotions.

Let the matters of our prayers be agreeable to thy Will, which is alwayes the same, and the fervency of our spirits to the motions of thy holy Spirits in us.

And then we doubt not, but thy spirituall perfections are such, as thou art neither to be pleased with affected Novelties for matter or manner, nor offended with the pious constancy of our Petitions in them both.

Whose varietie or constancie thou hast no where either forbidden or commanded, but left them to the pietie and prudence of thy Church, that both may be used, neither despised.

Keep men in that pious moderation of their judgements in matters of Religion, that their ignorance may not offend others, nor their opinion of their own abilities tempt them to deprive others, of what they may lawfully and devoutly use, to help their infirmities.

And since the advantage of Errour consists in novelty and variety, as Truths in unity and constancy: Suffer not thy Church to be pestered with errours, and deformed with undecencies in thy Service, under the pretence of variety and novelty. Nor to be deprived of truth, unity, and order, under this fallacy, That constancy is the cause of formality.

Lord,

Lord keep us from formall Hypocrisie in our owne hearts, and then we know that praying to thee, or praising of thee (with David, and other holy men) in the same forms cannot hurt us.

Give us wisdom to amend what is amisse within us, and there will be lesse to mend without us.

Evermore defend and deliver thy Church from the effects of blind zeal, and over-bold devotion.

17. Of the differences between the King and the two Houses, in point of Church-government.

TOuching the Government of the Church by Bishops, the common Jealousie hath been, that I am earnest and resolute to maintain it, not so much out of pietie, as policie, and reason of State.

Wherein so farre indeed reason of State doth induce Me to approve that Government above any other, as I find it impossible for a Prince to preserve the State in quiet, unlesse he hath such an influence upon Church-men; and they such a dependence on Him, as may best restrain the seditious exorbitancies of Ministers tongues; who with the Keys of Heaven have so farre the Keys of the Peoples hearts, as they prevail much by their Oratorie to let in, and shut out, both Peace and Loyaltie.

So that(I being as KING) intrusted by God, and the Laws, with the good both of Church and State; I see no reason I should give up, or weaken by any change, that power and influence which in right and reason I ought to have over both.

The moving Bishops out of the House of Peers (of which I have elsewhere given an account) was sufficient to take off any suspicion, that I encline to them for any use to be made of their Votes in State affairs: Though indeed I never thought any Bishop worthy to sit in that House, who would not Vote according to his conscience.

I must now in Charitie be thought desirous to preserve that Government in its right constitution, as a matter of Religion; wherein both my judgement is fully satisfied, that it hath of all other the fullest Scripture-grounds, and also the constant practice of all Christian Churches; till of late years the tumultuarinesse of People, or the factiousnesse and pride of Presbyters, or the covetousnesse of some States and Princes, gave occasion to some mens wits to invent new models, and propose them under specious titles, of Christs Government, Sceptre, and Kingdome; the better to serve their turns, to whom the change was beneficiall.

They must give Me leave, having none of their temptations to invite Me to alter the Government vernment of Bishops, (that I may have a title to their Estates) not to believe their pretended grounds to any new wayes, contrary to the full and constant testimony of all Histories, sufficiently convincing unbiaſed men; that as the Primitive Churches were undoubtedly governed by the Apostles, and their immediate Successours, the first and best Bishops; so it cannot in reason or charitie be supposed, that all Churches in the world should either be ignorant of the rule by them prescribed, or so soon deviate from their divine and holy pattern: That since the first Age, for 1500 years not one example can be produced of any settled Church, wherein were many Ministers and Congregations, which had not some Bishop above them, under whose jurisdiction and government they were.

Whose constant and universall practise agreeing with so large and evident Scripture-directions and examples, as are set down in the Epistles to Timothy and Titus, for the settling of that Government, not in the persons onely of Timothy and Titus, but in the succession; (the want of Government being that which the Church can no more dispense wth, in point of wel-being, then the want of the Word and Sacraments, in point of being:)

I wonder how men came to look with so envious an eye upon Bishops power and authoritie, as to oversee both the Ecclesiasticall use of them,

them, and Apostolicall constitution: which to Me seems no lesse evidently set forth, as to the main scope and designe of those Epistles, for the settling of a peculiar Office, Power, and Authority in them, as President-Bishops above others in point of Ordination, Censures, and other Acts of Ecclesiasticall discipline; then those shorter characters of the qualities and duties of Presbyter-Bishops, and Deacons, are described in some parts of the same Epistles; who in the latitude and communitive of the name, were then, and may not now improperly be called Bishops, as to the oversight and care of single Congregations, committed to them by the Apostles, or those Apostolicall Bishops, who (as Timothy and Titus) succeeded them in that ordinary power there assigned over larger divisions, in which were many Presbyters.

The humilitie of those first Bishops avoiding the eminent title of Apostles, as a name in the Churches style appropriated from its common notion (of a Messenger, or one sent,) to that speciall dignity which had extraordinary call, mission, gifts, and power immediately from Christ: they contented themselves with the ordinary titles of Bishops and Presbyters, untill use, (the great arbitratour of words, and master of language) finding reason to distinguish by a peculiar name those persons, whose power and office were indeed

indeed distinct from and above all other in the Church, as succeeding the Apostles in the ordinary & constant power of governing the Churches, the honour of (whose name they moderately, yet commendably declined) all Christian Churches (submitting to that speciall authoritie) appropriated also the name of Bishop, without any suspicion or reproch of arrogancie to those, who were by Apostolicall propagation rightly descended and invested into that highest and largest power of governing, even the most pure Primitive Churches: which, without all doubt had many such holy Bishops, after the pattern of Timothy and Titus; whose speciall power is not more clearly set down in those Epistles (the chief grounds and limits of all Episcopall claim, as from Divine right) then are the characters of these perilous times, and those men that make them such; who not enduring sound Doctrine, and clear Testimonies of all Churches practice, are most perverse Disputers, and proud Usurpers against true Episcopacy: who, if they be not Traitors and Boasters, yet they seem to be very covetous, heady, high-minded, inordinate and fierce, lovers of themselves, having much of the form, little of the power of godlinesse.

Who, by popular heaps of weak, light, and unlearned Teachers, seek to over-lay and smother the pregnancie and authoritie of that power of Epis-

Episcopall Government, which, beyond all equivocation and vulgar fallacie of names, is most convincingly set forth, both by Scripture, and all alter-Histories of the Church.

This I write rather like a Divine, then a Prince, that Posteritie may see (if ever these papers be publick) that I had fair grounds both from Scripture, Canons, and Ecclesiasticall examples, whereon My judgement was stated for Episcopall Government.

Nor was it any policie of State, or obstinacie of will, or partialitie of affection, either to men, or their Function which fixed Me; who cannot in point of worldly respects be so considerable to Me, as to recompence the injuries and losses, I, and my dearest relations with my Kingdoms, have sustained and hazarded, chiefly at first upon this quarrell.

And not onely in Religion, of which, Scripture is the best rule, and the Churches Univerfall practice the best commentarie; but also in right reason, and the true nature of Government, it cannot be thought that an orderly Subordination among Presbyters, or Ministers, should be any more against Christianitie, then it is in all secular and civil Governments, where paritie breeds Confusion and Faction.

I can no more believe, that such order is inconsistent with true Religion, then good features are

are with beauty , or numbers with harmonie.

Nor is it likely, that God, who appointed severall orders , and a Prelacie in the Government of his Church, among the Jewish Priests, should abhorre or forbid them among Christian Ministers; who have as much of the principles of schisme and division as other men : for preventing and suppressing of which, the Apostolicall wisdome, (which was Divine) after that Christians were multiplied to many Congregations , and Presbyters with them , appointed this way of Government, which might best preserve order and union with Authōritie.

So that I conceive it was not the favour of Princes , or ambition of Presbyters , but the wisdome and pietie of the Apostles , that first settled Bishops in the Church; which Authority they constantly used, and enjoyed in those times, which were purest for Religion , though sharpest for Persecution.

Not that I am against the managing of this Presidencie and Authoritie in one man , by the joynt Counsell and consent of many Presbyters: I have offered to restore that , as a fit means to avoid those Errours, Corruptions, and Partialities, which are incident to any one man : Also to avoid Tyranny , which becomes no Christians, least of all Churchmen; besides, it will be a means to take away that burden , and odium of affairs,

of affairs, which may lie too heavie on one mans shoulders, as indeed I think it formerly did on the Bishops here.

Nor can I see what can be more agreeable both to Reason and Religion, then such a frame of Government which is paternall, not Magisteriall; and wherein not onely the necessitie of avoiding Faction and Confusion, Emulations and Contempts, which are prone to arise among equals in power and function; but also the differences of some Ministers gifts, and aptitudes for Government above others, doth invite to imploy them, in reference to those abilities, wherein they are eminent.

Nor is this judgement of mine touching Episcopacy, any pre-occupation of opinion, which will not admit any oppositions against it: It is well known I have endeavoured to satisfie My Self in what the chief Patrons for other wayes can say against this, or for theirs: And I find they have, as farre lesse of Scripture-grounds, and of Reason; so for examples and practise of the Church, or testimonies of Histories, they are wholly destitute, wherein the whole stream runs so for Episcopacy, that there is not the least rivulet for any others.

As for those obtruded examples of some late reformed Churches, (for many retain Bishops still) whom necessitie of times and affairs rather excuseth, then commendeth for their in- conformity to all Antiquity : I could never see any reason why Churches orderly reformed and go- verned by Bishops, should be forced to conform to those few, rather then to the Catholick exam- ple of all Ancient Churches, which needed no Reformation : And to those Churches at this day, who governed by Bishops in all the Chri- stian world, are many more then Presbyterians or Independents can pretend to be: All whom the Churches in my three Kingdoms, lately governed by Bishops, would equalize (I think) it not exceed.

L

ther

Nor is it any point of wisdome or charity, where Christians differ, (as many do in some points) there to widen the differences, and at once to give all the Christian world (except a handfull of some Protestants) so great a scan- dall in point of Church-government; whom, though you may convince of their errours in some points of Doctrine, yet you shall never perswade them, that to complete their Reforma- tion, they must necessarily desert, and wholly cast off that Government, which they, and all before them, have ever owned as Catholick, Primitive, and Apostolicall : So farre, that never Schisma- ticks, nor Hereticks (except those Aierians) have strayed from the Unity and Conformity of the Church in that point, ever having Bishops above Presbyters.

Besides,

Besides, the late generall approbation and submission to this Government of Bishops, by the Clergy, as well as the Laity of these Kingdoms, is a great confirmation of my Judgement; and their inconstancy is a great prejudice against their noveltie. I cannot in charity so farre doubt of their learning or integrity, as if they understood not what heretofore they did; or that they did conform contrary to their consciences: So that their facility and levity is never to be excused, who, before ever the point of Church-government had any free and impartiall debate, contrary to their former oaths and practise, against their obedience to the Laws in force, and against my consent, have not onely quite cried down the Government by Bishops; but have approved and encouraged the violent and most illegall stripping all the Bishops, and many other Churchmen, of all their due Authority and Revenues, even to the selling away, and utter alienation of those Church-lands from any Ecclesiasticall uses. So great a power hath the stream of times, and the prevalency of parties over some mens judgements; of whose so sudden and so totall change, little reason can be given, besides the Scots Armie coming into England.

But the folly of these men will at last punish it self, and the Desertors of Episcopacy will appear the greatest enemies to, and betrayers of their own interest: for Presbyterie is never so considerable or effectually, as when it is joyned to, and crowned with Episcopacie. All Ministers wil find as great a difference in point of thriving, between the favour of the People, and of Princes, as plants do between being watered by hand, or by the sweet and liberall dewes of Heaven.

The tenuity and contempt of Clergy-men will soon let them see, what a poor carcase they are, when parted from the influence of that Head, to whose Supremacy they have been sworn.

A little moderation might have prevented great mischiefs: I am firm to Primitive Episcopacy, not to have it extirpated, (if I can hinder it.) Discretion without Passion might easily reform, whatever the rust of times, or indulgence of Laws, or corruption of manners have brought upon it. It being a grosse vulgar error to impute to, or revenge upon the Function, the faults of times, or persons; which seditious and popular principle, and practise, all wise-men abhorre.

For those Secular additaments and ornaments of Authority, Civil Honour, and Estate, which my Predecessours, and Christian Princes in all Countreys have annexed to Bishops and Church-men; I look upon them, but as just rewards of their learning and piety, who are fit to be in any degree of Church-government; also ena-

enablements to vvorks of Charity, and Hospitality, meet strengthenings of their Authority in point of respect and observance; vvhich in peace-full times is hardly paid to any Governours by the measure of their virtues, so much, as by that of their estates; Poverty and meannesse exposing them and their Authority to the contempt of li-centious minds and manners, which persecuting Times much restrained.

I would have such men Bishops, as are most worthy of those encouragements, and best able to use them: if at any time my judgement of men failed, my good intention made my error veniall: and some Bishops, I am sure I had, whose learning, gravity, and piety, no men of any worth or forehead can deny: But, of all men, I would have Church-men, especially the Governours, to be redeemed from that vulgar neglect; which (besides an innate principle of vitious opposition, which is in all men against those that seem to reprove, or restrain them) will necessarily follow both the Presbyterian parity, which makes all Ministers equall; and the Independent inferiority, which sets their Pastours below the People.

This for my judgement touching Episcopacy, wherein (God knows) I do not gratifie any designe or passion with the least perverting of Truth

And now I appeal to God above, and all the Christian world, whether it be just for Subjects, or pious for Christians, by violence, and infinite indignities, with servile restraints to seek to force Me their K I N G and Sovereigne, as some men have endeavoured to do, against all these grounds of my Judgement, to consent to their weak and divided novelties.

The greatest pretender of them desires not more then I do, That the Church should be governed, as Christ hath appointed, in true Reason, and in Scripture; of which, I could never see any probable shew for any other wayes : who either content themselves with the examples of some Churches in their infancy and solitude, when one Presbyter might serve one Congregation in a Citie or Countrey; or else they denie these most evident Truths, That the Apostles were Bishops over those Presbyters they ordained, as well as over the Churches they planted; and that Government being necessary for the Churches well-being, when multiplied and sociated, must also necessarily descend from the Apostles to others, after the example of that power and superiority, they had above others; which could not end with their persons, since the use and end of such Government still continue.

It is most sure, that the purest Primitive and best Churches flourished under Episcopacy; and may so still, if ignorance, superstition, avarice, revenge, revenge, and other disorderly, and disloyall passions had not so blown up some mens minds against it, that what they want of Reasons or Primitive Patterns, they supply with violence and oppression; wherein some mens zeal for Bishops Lands, Houses, and Revenues hath set them on work to eat up Episcopacy: which (however other men esteem) to Me is no lesse sinne, then Sacriledge, or a robbery of G O D, (the giver of all we have) of that portion which devout minds have thankfully given again to him, in giving it to his Church and Prophets; through whose hands he graciously accepts even a cup of cold water, as a libation offered to himself.

Furthermore, as to My particular engagement above other men, by an Oath agreeable to My judgement, I am solemnly obliged to preserve that Government, and the rights of the Church.

Were I convinced of the unlawfulness of the Function as Antichristian, (which some men boldly, but weakly calumniate) I could soon, with judgement, break that Oath, which erroneously was taken by Me.

But being daily by the best disquisition of truth, more confirmed in the Reason and Religion of that, to which I am sworn; How can any man that wisheth not my damnation, perswade Me at once to so notorious and combined sins, of sacriledge and perjury? besides the many personall

Injustices I must do to many worthy men, who are as legally invested in their estates, as any who seek to deprive them; and they have by no Law been convicted of those crimes, which might forfeit their estates and livelihoods.

I have oft wondred, how men pretending to tenderesse of Conscience and Reformation, can at once tell Me, that my Coronation Oath binds Me to consent to whatsoever they shall propound to Me, (which they urge with such violence) though contrary to all that Rationall and Religious freedome, which every man ought to preserve, and of which they seem so tender in their own Votes; yet at the same time these men will needs perswade Me, That I must, and ought to - dispencc with, and roundly break that part of my Oath, which binds Me (agreeable to the best - light of Reason and Religion I have) to maintain the Government, and legall Rights of the Church. 'Tis strange my oath should be valid in that part, which both my Self, and all men in their own case, esteeme injurious and unreasonable, as being against the very naturall and essential - libertie of our souls; yet it should be invalid, and to be broken in another clause, wherein I think my Self justly obliged, both to God and Man.

Yet upon this Rack chiefly have I been held so long, by some mens ambitious Covetousnesse,
and

and sacrilegious Crueltie ; torturing (with Me) both Church and State, in Civil dissentions, till I shall be forced to consent and declare that I do approve , what (God knows) I utterly dislike, and in my Soul abhorre, as many wayes highly against Reason, Justice, and Religion; and where-to if I should shamefully , and dishonourably give my consent , yet should I not by so doing, satisfie the divided Interests and Opinions of those Parties, which contend with each other, as well as both against Me and Episcopacie.

Nor can my late condescending to the Scots in point of Church-government , be rightly objected against Me , as an inducement for Me, to consent to the like in my other Kingdoms , For it should be considered, that Episcopacie was not so rooted and settled there , as 'tis here; nor I (in that respect) so strictly bound to continue it in that Kingdome, as in this; for what I think in my judgement best , I may not think so absolutely necessary for all places, and at all times.

If any shall impute my yielding to them , as my failing and sinne, I can easily acknowledge it; but that is no argument to do so again , or much worse, I being now more convinced in that point: nor indeed hath my yielding to them been so happie and successfull , as to incourage Me to grant the like to others.

Did I see any thing more of Christ, as to Meek-

Meeknesse, Justice, Order, Charitie, and Loyaltie, in those that pretend to other modes of Government, I might suspect my judgement to be biased, or forestalled with some prejudice and wontednesse of opinion; but I have hitherto so much cause to suspect the contrary in the manners of many of those men, that I cannot from them gain the least reputation for their new waies of Government.

Nor can I find that in any Reformed Churches (whose patterns are so cried up, and obtruded upon the Churches under my Dominion) that either Learning, or Religion, works of pietie or Charitie, have so flourished beyond what they have done in my Kingdoms (by Gods blessing) which might make Me believe either Presbytery, or Independencie have a more benigne influence upon the Church and mens hearts and lives, then Episcopacie in its right constitution.

The abuses of which, deserve to be extirpated, as much as the use retained; for I think it farre better to hold to primitive and uniform Antiquitie, then to complie with divided noveltie.

A right Episcopacie would at once satisfie all just desires and interests of good Bishops, humble Presbyters, and sober People; so as Church affairs should be managed, neither with Tyranny, paritie, nor popularitie; neither Bishops ejected, nor Presbyters despised, nor People oppressed.

And

And in this integrity both of my Judgement and Conscience, I hope God will preserve Me.

For thou, O Lord, knowest my uprightnesse, and tendernesse; as thou hast set Me to be a Defender of the Faith, and a Protectour of thy Church, so suffer Me not by any violence, to be overborn against my Conscience.

Arise, O Lord, maintain thine own cause, let not thy Church be deformed, as to that Government, which derived from thy Apostles, hath been retained in purest and primitive times, till the Revenues of the Church became the object of secular envy; which seeks to rob it of all the incouragements of Learning and Religion.

Make Me, as the good Samaritane, compassionate, and helpfull to thy afflicted Church; which some men have wounded and robbed; others passe by without regard either to pity, or relieve.

As my power is from Thee, so give me grace to use it for Thee.

And though I am not suffered to be Master of my other Rights as a KING, yet preserve Me in that liberty of Reason, love of Religion, and thy Churches welfare, which are fixed in my Conscience as a Christian.

Preserve from sacrilegious invasions, those temporall blessings, which thy providence hath bestowed on thy Church, for thy glory.

Forgive their sins and errours, who have deserved thy just permission, thus to let in the wild Boar, and subtill Foxes, to waste and deform thy Vineyard, which thy right hand

hand hath planted, and the dew of Heaven so long watered to a happy and flourishing estate.

O let Me not bear the infamous brand to all Posterity, of being the first Christian KING in this Kingdome, who should consent to the oppression of thy Church, and the Fathers of it; whose errours I would rather; with Constantine, cover with silence, and reform with meeknesse; then expose their persons, and sacred Functions, to vulgar contempt.

Thou, O Lord, seest how much I have suffered with, and for thy Church; make no long tarrying, O my God, to deliver both Me, and it, from unreasonable men, whose counsells have brought forth and continue such violent confusions, by a precipitant destroying the ancient boundaries of thy Churches peace, thereby letting in all manner of errours, schismes, and disorders.

O thou God of order, and of truth, in thy good time, abate the malice, assuage the rage, and confound all the mischievous devices of thine, mine, and thy Churches enemies.

That I, and all that love thy Church, may sing praises to Thee, and ever magnifie thy salvation, even before the sonnes of men.

18. Upon Vxbridge-Treatie, and other offers made by the King.

I Look upon the way of Treaties, as a retiring from fighting like Beasts, to arguing like Men; whose strength should be more in their understandings, then in their limbs. And

And though I could seldome get opportunities to treat, yet I never wanted either desire or disposition to it; having greater confidence of my Reason, then my Sword: I was so wholly resolved to yield to the first, that I thought neither my Self, nor others should need to use the second, if once we rightly understood each other.

Nor did I ever think it a diminution of Me, to prevent them with expresses of my desires, and even importunities to Treat: It being an office, not onely of humanitie, rather to use Reason, then force; but also of Christianitie, to seek peace and pursue it.

As I was very unwillingly compelled to defend my Self with Arms, so I very willingly embraced any thing tending to Peace.

The events of all Warre by the Sword being very dubious, and of a Civil Warre uncomfortable; the end hardly recompencing, and late repairing the mischief of the means.

Nor did any successe I had, ever enhaunce with Me the price of Peace, as earnestly desired by Me as any man; though I was like to pay dearer for it then any man: All that I sought to reserve was, Mine Honour, and My Conscience; the one I could not part with as a KING, the other as a Christian.

The Treatie at Uxbridge gave the fairest hopes of an happy composure; had others applied themselves

selves to it with the same moderation as I did, I am confident the Warre had then ended.

I was willing to condescend, as farre as Reason, Honour, and Conscience would give Me leave; nor were the remaining differences so essentiall to my Peoples happinesse, or of such consequence, as in the least kind to have hindered my Subjects either securitie or prosperitie, for they better enjoyed both many years, before ever those demands were made, some of which to denie, I think the greatest Justice to my Self, and favour to my Subjects.

I see, Jealousies are not so easily allayed, as they are raised: Some men are more afraid to retreat from violent Engagements, then to Engage: what is wanting in equitie, must be made up in pertinacie. Such as had little to enjoy in peace, or to lose in warre, studied to render the very name of Peace odious and suspected.

In Church affairs, where I had least libertie of prudence, having so many strict ties of Conscience upon Me; yet I was willing to condescend so farre to the settling of them, as might have given fair satisfaction to all men, whom faction, covetousnes, or superstition had not engaged more, then any true zeal, charity, or love of Reformation.

I was content to yield to all that might seem to advance true pietie; I onely sought to continue what was necessary in point of Order,
Main-

Maintenance and Authoritie to the Churches Government; and what I am perswaded (as I have elsewhere set down My thoughts more fully) is most agreeable to the true Principles of all Government, raised to its full stature and perfection, as also to the primitive Apostolicall pattern, and the practice of the Universall Church conform thereto.

From which wholly to recede, without any probable reason urged or answered, onely to satisfie some mens wills and fantasies (which yet agree not among themselves in any point, but that of extirpating Episcopacie, and fighting against Me) must needs argue such a softnesse and infirmitie of mind in Me, as will rather part with Gods Truth, then Mans Peace, and rather lose the Churches honour, then crosse some mens Factious humours.

God knows, and time will discover, who were most too blame for the unsuccessfullnesse of that Treatie, and who must bear the guilt of after-calamities: I believe, I am very excusable both before God, and all unpassionate men, who have seriously weighed those transactions, wherein I endeavoured no lesse the restauration of Peace to my people, then the preservation of my own Crowns to my Posterity.

Some men have that height, as to interpret all fair condescendings, as Arguments of feeblenesse, ness, and glory most in an unflexible stiffnesse, when they see others most supple and inclinable to them.

A grand Maxime with them was, alwayes to ask something which in reason and honour must be denied, that they might have some colour to refuse all that was in other things granted; setting Peace at as high a rate, as the worst effects of warre; endeavouring first to make Me destroy my Self by dishonourable Concessions, that so they might have the lesse to do.

This was all which that Treatie, or any other produced, to let the world see, how little I would deny, or they grant, in order to the Publick peace.

That it gave occasion to some mens further restivenesse, is imputable to their own depraved tempers, not to any Concessions or Negations of mine: I have alwayes the content of what I offered, and they the regret, and blame for what they refused.

The highest tide of successe set Me not above a Treatie, nor the lowest ebbe below a Fight: Though I never thought it any signe of true valour, to be prodigall of mens lives, rather then to be drawn to produce our own reasons, or subscribe to other mens.

That which made Me for the most part preface the unsuccessfullnesse of any Treatie, was, some mens unwillingnes to Treat: which implied some things were to be gained by the Sword, whose unreasonableness they were loth to have fairly scanned, being more proper to be acted by Souldiers, then by Counsellours.

I pray God forgive them that were guilty of that Treaties breaking, and give them grace to make their advantages gotten by the Sword, a better opportunity to use such moderation as was then wanting; that so, though Peace were for our sinnes justly deferred, yet at last it may be happily obtain'd; what we could not get by our Treaties, we may gain by our Prayers.

O Thou, that art the God of Reason, and of Peace, who disdainest not to treat with Sinners, preventing them with offers of attonement, and beseeching them to be reconciled with thy self: who wantest not Power, or Justice to destroy them, yet aboundest in Mercy to save; soften our hearts by the blood of our Redeemer, and persuade us to accept of Peace with thy Self, and both to procure and preserve peace among our selves, as Men and Christians: How oft have I intreated for Peace! but when I speak thereof, they make them ready to Warre.

Condemne us not to our passions which are destructive, both of our selves, and of others.

Clear up our understandings, to see thy Truth, both in Reason, as Men; and in Religion, as Christians: and encline all our hearts to hold the unity of the Spirit, in the bond of Peace.

M

Take

Take from us that enmitie which is now in our hearts against Thee; and give us that Charity which should be among our selves.

Remove the evils of Warre we have deserved, and bestow upon us that Peace, which onely Christ our great Peacemaker can merit.

19. Upon the various events of the Warre; Victories and Defeats.

THe various Successes of this unhappy War, have at least, afforded Me variety of good Meditations: sometimes God was pleased to try Me with Victory, by worsting mine enemies, that I might know how with moderation and thanks to own, & use his power, who is onely the true Lord of Hosts, able when he pleases to repress the confidence of those, that fought against Me, with so great advantages for power and number.

From small beginnings on my part, he let Me see that I was not wholly forsaken by my peoples love, or his protection.

Other times God was pleased to exercise my patience, and teach Me not to trust in the arm of Flesh, but in the living God.

My sins sometimes prevailed against the justice of my Cause; and those that were with Me wanted not matter and occasion for his just chastisement both of them and Me: Nor were my my enemies lesse punished by that prosperity, which hardened them to continue that injustice by open hostility, which was begun by most riotous and unparliamentary Tumults.

There is no doubt but personall and private finnes, may oft-times over-balance the Justice of Publick engagements; nor doth God account every gallant man (in the words esteem) a fit instrument, to assert in the way of Warre, a righteous Cause: The more men are prone to arrogate to their own skill, valour, and strength, the lesse doth God ordinarily work by them for his own glory.

I am sure the event or successe can never state the Justice of any Cause, nor the peace of mens Consciences, nor the eternal fate of their Souls.

Those with Me had (I think) clearly and undoubtedly, for their Justification, the Word of God, & the Laws of the Land, together with their own Oaths; all requiring obedience to my just Commands, but to none other under Heaven without Me, or against Me, in the point of raising Arms.

Those on the other side are forced to flie to the shifts of some pretended Fears, and wild fundamentals of State (as they call them) which actually overthrow the present fabrick, both of Church and State; being such imaginary Reasons for self-defence, as are most impertinent for those men to alledge, who being my Subjects, were manifestly the first assaulters of Me and the Laws : first by unsuppressed Tumults , after by lifted Forces :

- The same Allegations they use, will fit any Faction that hath but power and confidence enough, to second with the Sword all their demands, against the present Laws and Governours ; which can never be such as some side or other will not find fault with, so as to urge what they call a Reformation of them, to a Rebellion against them,
- some parasitick Preachers have dared to call those Martyrs, who died fighting against Me, the Laws, their Oaths, and the Religion established.

But sober Christians know , That glorious Title, can with Truth be applyed onely to those, who sincerely preferred Gods Truth, and their duty in all these particulars, before their lives, and all that was dear to them in this world ; who having no advantageous designs by any Innovation, were religiously sensible of those ties to God, the Church, and my Self, which lay upon their souls, both for obedience and just assistance.

God could, and I doubt not but he did through his mercy, crown many of them with eternall life, whose lives were lost in so just a cause: The destruction of their bodies being sanctified, as a means to save their souls.

Their wounds and temporall ruine serving as a gracious opportunity for their eternall health and happinelle ; while the evident approach of death death did, through Gods grace, effectually dispose their hearts to such Humilitie, Faith, and Repentance, which together with the Rectitude of their present engagement, would fully prepare them for a better life then that, which their enemies brutish and disloyall fierceness could deprive them of; or without repentance hope to enjoy.

They have often indeed, had the better against my side in the Field; but never, I believe, at the Bar of Gods Tribunall, or their own Consciences; where they are more afraid to encounter those many pregnant Reasons, both from Law, Allegiance, and all true Christian grounds, which conflict with, and accuse them in their own thoughts, then they oft were in a desperate bravery to fight against those Forces, which sometimes God gave Me.

Whose condition conquered and dying, I make no question, but is infinitely more to be chosen by a sober man, (that duly values his duty, his soul, and eternity, beyond the enjoyments of this present life) then the most triumphant glory, wherein their and mine enemies supervive; who can hardly avoid to be daily tormented by that horrid guilt, wherewith their suspicious, or now convicted Consciences do pursue them, especially since they and all the world have seen, how false and unintended those pretensions were, which they first set forth, as the onely plausible

(though not justifiable) grounds of raising a Warre, and continuing it thus long against Me, and the Laws established; in whose safetie and preservation all honest men think the welfare of their Countrey doth consist.

For, and with all which, it is farre more honourable and comfortable to suffer, then to prosper in their ruine and subversion.

I have often prayed, that all on my side might joyn true pietie, with the sense of their Loyaltie; and be as faithfull to God and their own souls, as they were to Me. That the defects of the one, might not blast the endeavours of the other.

Yet I cannot think, that any shews, or truth of piety on the other side, were sufficient to dispence with, or expiate the defects of their Dutie and Loyaltie to Me, which have so pregnant convictions on mens Consciences, that even profane men are moved by the sense of them, to venture their lives for Me.

I never had any victory which was without my sorrow, because it was on mine own Subjects, who like Absolom, died many of them in their sin: and yet I never suffered any defeat, which made Me despair of Gods mercy and defence.

I never desired such Victories, as might serve to conquer, but onely restore the Laws and Liberties of my people; which I saw were extremely oppressed, together with my Rights, by those men who were impatient of any just restraint. When

When Providence gave Me, or denied Me Victory, my desire was neither to boast of my power, nor to charge God foolishly; who I believed at last would make all things to work together for my good.

I wished no greater advantages by the Warre, then to bring my enemies to moderation, and my friends to peace.

I was afraid of the temptation of an absolute conquest, and never prayed more for victory over others, then over my Self. When the first was denied, the second was granted Me, which God saw best for Me.

The different events were but the methods of Divine Justice, by contrary winds to winnow us: That, by punishing our sinnes, he might purge them from us; and by deferring peace, he might prepare us more to prize, and better to use so great a blessing.

My often Messages for Peace, shewed that I delighted not in Warre: as my former Concessions sufficiently testified, how willingly I would have prevented it; and my totall unpreparednesse for it, how little I intended it

The conscience of my innocency forbad Me to fear a War; but the love of my Kingdoms commanded Me (if possible) to avoid it,

I am guilty in this Warre of nothing, but this, That I gave such advantages to some men, by confirming their power, which they knew not to use with that modesty and gratitude, which became their Loyaltie and my confidence.

Had I yielded lesse, I had been opposed lesse; had I denied more, I had been more obeyed.

'Tis now too late to review the occasions of the War: I wish onely a happy conclusion, of so unhappy beginnings: The inevitable fate of our sinnes was (no doubt) such, as would no longer suffer the Divine Justice to be quiet; we having conquered his patience, are condemned by mutuall conquerings, to destroy one another: for the most prosperous successes on either side, impair the welfare of the whole.

Those Victories are still miserable, that leave our sinnes unsubdued; flushing our pride, and animating to continue injuries.

Peace it self is not desirable, till repentance have prepared us for it.

When we fight more against our selves, and lesse against God, we shall cease fighting against one another: I pray God these may all meet in our hearts, and so dispose us to an happy conclusion of these Civil Warres, that I may know better to obey God, and govern my People, and they may learn better to obey both God and Me.

Nor do I desire any man should be further subject to Me, then all of us may be subject to God.

O my God, make Me content to be overcome, when thou wilt have it so.

Teach Me the noblest victory over my Self, and my Enemies by patience; which was Christs conquest, and may well become a Christian King.

Between both thy hands, the right sometimes supporting, and the left afflicting; fashion us to that frame of piety thou likest best.

Forgive the pride that attends our prosperous, and the repinings which follow our disastrous events; when going forth in our own strength, thou withdrawest thine, and goest not forth with our Armies.

Be thou all, when we are something, and when we are nothing; that thou mayest have the glory, when we are in a victorious, or inglorious condition.

Thou, O Lord, knowest, how hard it is for Me, to suffer so much evil from my Subjects, to whom I intend nothing but good; and I cannot but suffer in those evils which they compell Me to inflict upon them; punishing My Self in their punishments.

Since therefore both in conquering, and being conquered, I am still a Sufferer; I beseech thee to give Me a double portion of thy Spirit, and that measure of grace, which onely can be sufficient for Me.

As I am most afflicted, so make Me most reformed: that I may be not onely happy to see an end of these civil distractions, but a chief Instrument to restore and establish a firm, and blessed Peace to my Kingdoms.

Stir up in all Parties pious ambitions to overcome each ether

- other with reason, moderation, and such self-deniall, as becomes those, who consider, that our mutuall divisions are our common distractions, and the Union of all is every good mans chiefeſt interest.

- If, O Lord, as for the ſinnes of our peace, thou haſt brought upon us the miſeries of warre; ſo for the ſinnes of warre, thou ſhouldeſt ſee fit ſtill to denie us the bleſſing of peace, and ſo to keep us in a circulation of miſeries; yet give Me thy Servant, and all Loyall, though afflicted Subjects, to enjoy that peace, which the world can neither

- give to us, nor take from us.
Impute not to Me the bloud of my Subjects, which with infinite unwillingneſſe and grief, hath been ſhed by Me, in my juſt and neceſſary defence; but waſh Me with that precious bloud, which hath been ſhed for Me, by my great Peace-maker, Jeſus Chriſt. Who will, I truſt, redeem Me ſhortly out of all my troubles: For, I know, the triumphing of the Wicked is but ſhort, and the joy of Hypocrites is but for a moment.

20. Vpon the Reformations of the Times.

- NO Glorie is more to be envied then that, of due Reforming either Church or State, when deformities are ſuch, that the perturbation and noveltie are not like to exceed the benefit of Reforming.

Although God ſhould not honour Me ſo farre, as to make Me an Inſtrument of ſo good a work, yet I should be glad to see it done.

As I was well pleased with this Parliaments first intentions, to reform what the Indulgence of Times, and corruptions of manners might have depraved; so I am sorry to see, after the freedome of Parliament was by factious Tumults oppressed, how little regard was had to the good Laws established, and the Religion settled, which ought to be the first rule and standard of reforming: with how much partialitie, and popular compliance the passions and opinions of men have been gratified, to the detriment of the Publick, and the infinite scandall of the Reformed Religion.

What dissolutions of all Order and Government in the Church; what novelties of Schismes, and corrupt opinions; what undecencies and confusions in sacred administrations; what sacrilegious invasions upon the Rights and Revenues of the Church; what contempt and oppressions of the Clergie; what injurious diminutions and persecutings of Me, have followed (as showers do warm gleams) the talk of Reformation, all sober men are Witnesses, and with my Self sad Spectatours hitherto.

The great miscarriage, I think, is, that popular clamours and fury, have been allowed the reputation of zeal, and the publick sense, so that the study to please some Parties hath indeed injured all.

Freedome, moderation, and impartialitie are sure

sure the best tempers of reforming Councils, and endeavours : what is acted by Factions, cannot but offend more then it pleaseth.

I have offered to put all differences in Church affairs and Religion, to the free consultation of a Synod, or Convocation rightly chosen ; the results of whose Councils, as they would have included the Votes of all, so it's like they would have given most satisfaction to all.

The Assembly of Divines, whom the two Houses have applied (in an unwonted way) to advise of Church affairs, I dislike not further, then that they are not legally convened and chosen ; nor act in the name of all the Clergie of England ; nor with freedome and impartialitie can do any thing, being limited and confined, if not overawed, to do and declare what they do.

For I cannot think so many men cried up for learning and pietie, who formerly allowed the Liturgie and Government of the Church of England, as to the main; would have so suddenly agreed quite to abolish both of them (the last of which, they knew to be of Apostolicall institution, at least, as of Primitive and Universall practice) if they had been left to the libertie of their own suffrages, and if the influence of contrary Factions had not by secret encroachments of hopes, and fears, prevailed upon them, to complie with so great and dangerous Innovations in the Church;

Church; without any regard to their own former judgement and practice, or to the common interest and honour of all the Clergie, and in them of Order, Learning, and Religion; against examples of all ancient Churches, the Laws in force, and my consent; which is never to be gained, against so pregnant light, as in that point shines on my understanding.

For I conceive, that where the Scripture is not so clear and punctuall in precepts, there the constant and Universall practice of the Church, in things not contrary to Reason, Faith, good Manners, or any positive Command, is the best Rule that Christians can follow.

I was willing to grant, or restore to Presbyterie, what with Reason or Discretion it can pretend to, in a conjuncture with Episcopacie; but for that wholly to invade the Power, and by the Sword to arrogate, and quite abrogate the Authoritie of that ancient Order, I think neither just, as to Episcopacie, nor safe for Presbyterie; nor yet any way convenient for this Church or State.

A due Reformation had easily followed moderate Counsels; and such (I believe) as would have given more content, even to the most of those Divines, who have been led on with much Gravitie and Formalitie, to carrie on other mens designs: which no doubt many of them by this time time discover, though they dare not but smother

- their frustrations and discontents.

The specious and popular titles of Christs Government, Throne, Sceptre, and Kingdome; (which certainly is not divided, nor hath two fa- ces, as their parties now have, at least) as also the noise of a through-Reformation, these may as
- easily be fixed on new models, as fair colours may be put to ill-favoured figures.

The breaking of Church windows, which Time had sufficiently defaced; pulling down of Crosses, which were but Civil, not Religious marks; defacing of the Monuments, and Inscriptions of the Dead, which served but to put Po-steritie in mind, to thank God, for that clearer light wherein they live: The leaving of all Ministers to their liberties, and private abilities, in the Publick service of God, where no Christian can tell to what he may say, Amen, nor what adventure he may make, of seeming, at least, to consent to the Errours, Blasphemies, and ridiculous Undecencies, which bold and ignorant men list to vent in their Prayers, Preaching, and other Offices. The setting forth also of old Catechismes, and Confessions of Faith new drest, importing as much, as if there had been no sound or clear Doctrine of Faith in this Church, before some foure
- or five years consultation had matured their thoughts, touching their first Principles of Religion.

All

All these, and the like are the effects of popular, specious, and deceitfull Reformations, (that they might not seem to have nothing to do) and may give some short flashes of content to the vulgar, (who are taken with novelties, as children with babies, very much, but not very long.) But all this amounts not to, nor can in Justice merit the glorie of the Churches through Reformation; since they leave all things more deformed, disorderly, and discontented, then when they began, in point of Pietie, Moralitie, Charitie, and good Order.

Nor can they easily recompense or remedie the inconveniences and mischiefs, which they have purchased so dearly, and which have and ever will necessarily ensue, till due remedies be applied.

I wish they would at last, make it their Unanimous work, to do Gods work, and not their own. Had Religion been first considered (as it merited) much trouble might have been prevented,

But some men thought, that the Government of this Church and State, fixed by so many Laws and long Customes, would not run into their new moulds, till they had first melted it in the fire of Civil Warre; by the advantages of which they resolved, if they prevailed, to make my Self and all my Subjects fall down, and worship the Images they should form and set up: If there had been as much of Christs Spirit, for meeknesse, wisdom, and charitie in mens hearts, as there was of his name used in the pretensions, to reform all to Christs Rule; it would certainly have obtained more of Gods blessing, and produced more of Christs Glorie, the Churches good, the Honour of Religion, and the Unitie of Christians.
there

Publick Reformers had need first Act in private, and practise that on their own hearts, which they purpose to trie on others; for Deformities within, will soon betray the Pretenders of publick Reformation, to such private designs as must needs hinder the publick good.

I am sure the right Methods of Reforming the Church, cannot consist with that of perturbing the Civil State; nor can Religion be justly advanced by depressing Loyaltie, which is one of the chiefest Ingredients, and Ornaments of true Religion: For, next to Fear God, is, Honour the King.

I doubt not but Christs Kingdome may be set up, without pulling down mine; nor will any men in impartiall times appear good Christians, that approve not themselves good Subjects.

Christs Government will confirm mine, not overthrow it, since as I own mine from Him, so I desire to rule for his glory, & his Churches good.

Had some men truly intended Christs Government, or knew what it meant in their hearts, they they could never have been so ill governed in their words, and actions, both against Me, and one another.

As good ends cannot justifie evil means, so nor will evil beginnings ever bring forth good conclusions; unlesse God by a miracle of Mercie, create Light out of Darknesse, order out of our confusions, and peace out of our passions.

Thou, O Lord, who onely canst give us beauty for ashes, and Truth for Hypocrisie; suffer us not to be miserably deluded with Pharisaicall washings, in stead of Christian reformings.

Our greatest deformities are within, make us the severest Censurers, and first reformers of our own souls.

That we may in clearnesse of judgement, and uprightness of heart, be means to reform what is indeed amisse in Church and State.

Create in us clean hearts, O Lord, and renew right spirits within us; that we may do all by thy directions, to thy glory, and with thy blessing.

Pitie the deformities, which some rash and cruel Reformers have brought upon this Church and State: Quench the fires which Factions have kindled, under the pretence of Reforming.

As Thou hast shewed the world by their divisions, and confusions, what is the pravity of some mens intentions, and weaknesse of their judgements; so bring us at last more refined out of those fires, by the methods of Christian and charitable Reformations : wherein nothing of ambition, revenge, covetousnesse, or sacriledge, may have any influence upon their counsels, whom thy providence in just and lawfull wayes shall entrust with so great good, and now most necessary work. That I and my People may be so blest with inward piety, as may best teach us how to use the blessing of outward peace.

21. Vpon His Majesties Letters, taken, and divulged.

THe taking of my Letters was an opportunity, which, as the malice of mine enemies could hardly have expected ; so they knew not how with honour and civility to use it : Nor do I think with sober and worthy minds, any thing in them could tend so much to my reproch, as the odious divulging of them did to the infamie of the Divulgers : The greatest experiments of virtue and Noblenesse, being discovered in the greatest advantages against an enemy; and the greatest obligations being those which are put upon us by them, from whom we could least have expected them.

And such I should have esteemed the concealing of my papers : The freedome and secrecie of which, commands a civility from all men, not wholly barbarous ; nor is there any thing more inhumane, then to expose them to publick view.

Yet

Yet since Providence will have it so, I am content so much of my heart (which I study to approve to Gods omniscience) should be discovered to the world, without any of those dresses, or popular captations, which some men use in their Speeches and Expresses; I wish my Subjects had yet a clearer sight into my most retired thoughts :

Where they might discover, how they are divided between the love and care I have, not more to preserve my own Rights, then to procure their peace and happiness, and that extreme grief to see them both deceived and destroyed.

Nor can any mens malice be gratified further by my Letters, then to see my constancy to my Wife, the Laws, and Religion. Bees will gather honey where the Spider sucks poyson.

That I endeavour to avoid the pressures of my Enemies, by all fair and just correspondencies, no man can blame, who loves Me, or the Commonwealth; since my Subjects can hardly be happy if I be miserable, or enjoy their peace and liberties while I am oppressed.

The world may see how soon mens designs, like Aboloms, is by enormous actions to widen differences, and exasperate all sides to such distances, as may make all reconciliation desperate: Yet I thank God, I can not onely with patience bear this, as other indignities, but with Charity forgive them.

The integrity of my intentions is not jealous of any injury, my expressions can do them; for although the confidence of privacy may admit greater freedom in writing such Letters, which may be liable to envious exceptions; yet the innocency of my chief purposes cannot be so stained, or mis-interpreted by them, as not to let all men see, that I wish nothing more then an happy compofure of differences with Justice and Honour, not more to mine own, then my peoples content, who have any sparks of Love or Loyaltie left in them: who by those my Letters may be convinced, that I can both mind and act mine own, and my Kingdoms affairs, so as becomes a Prince; which mine Enemies have alwayes been very loth should be believed of Me, as if I were wholly confined to the Dictates and Directions of others; whom they please to brand with the names of evil Counsellours.

Its probable some men wil now look upon Me as my own Counsellour, and having none else to quarrel with under that notion, they wil hereafter confine their anger to my Self: Although I know they are very unwilling I should enjoy the liberty of mine own Thoughts, or follow the light of mine own Conscience, which they labour to bring into an absolute captivity to themselves; not allowing me to think their Counfels to be other then good for Me, which have so long maintained a War against Me.

The

The Victory they obtained that day, when my Letters became their prize, had been enough to have satiated the most ambitious thirst of popular glory among the Vulgar; with whom prosperity gains the greatest esteem and applause, as adversity exposeth to their greatest slighting and disrespect: As if good fortune were alwayes the shadow of Virtue and Justice, and did not oftner attend vitious and injurious actions, as to this world.

But I see no secular advantages seem sufficient to that cause, which began with tumults, and depends chiefly upon the reputation with the vulgar.

They think no Victories so effectually to their designs, as those that most rout and waste my Credit with my People; in whose hearts they seek by all means to smother and extinguish all sparks of Love, Respect, and Loyaltie to Me, that they may never kindle again, so as to recover mine, the Laws, and the Kingdoms Liberties, which some men seek to overthrow. The taking away of my Credit, is but a necessary preparation to the taking away of my Life, and my Kingdoms: First, I must seem neither fit to Live, nor worthy to Reigne: By exquisite methods of cunning and cruelty, I must be compelled, first to follow the Funerals of my Honour, and then be destroyed: But I know Gods unerring and impartial Justice can, and will overrule the most perverse wills and designs of men: He is able, and (I hope) will turn even the worst of mine Enemies thoughts and actions to my good.

Nor do I think, that by the surprize of my Letters, I have lost any more then so many papers: How much they have lost of that reputation, for Civility and Humanity (which ought to be paid to all men, and most becomes such as pretend to Religion) besides that of Respect and Honour, which they ow to their KING, present, and after-times will judge. And I cannot think that their own consciences are so stupid, as not to inflict upon them some secret impressions of that shame and dishonour, which attends all unworthy actions, have they never so much of publick flattery, and popular countenance.

I am sure they can never expect the Divine approbation of such indecent actions, if they do but remember how God blest the modest respect and filiall tenderneſſe, which Noahs sonnes bare to to their Father; nor did his open infirmity justifie Chams impudencie, or exempt him from that curse of being Servant of Servants; which curse must needs be on them, who seek by dishonourable actions to please the Vulgar, and confirm by ignoble acts, their dependance upon the People.

Nor can their malicious intentions be ever either ex.

excusable, or prosperous, who thought by this means to expose Me to the highest reproch and contempt of my People; forgetting that duty of modest concealment, which they owed to the Father of their Countrey, in case they had discovered any reall uncomelineffe; which, I thank God they did not; who can, and I believe hath made Me more respected in the hearts of many (as he did David) to whom they thought, by publishing my private Letters, to have rendred Me as a vile Person, not fit to be trusted or considered under any notion of Majestie.

But thou, O Lord, whose wise and all-disposing providence, ordereth the greatest contingencies of humane affairs; make Me to see the constancie of thy mercies to Me, in the greatest advantages thou seemest to give the malice of my Enemies against Me.

As thou didst blast the counsel of Achitophel, turning it to Davids good, and his own ruine: so canst thou defeat their design, who intended by publishing my private Letters, nothing else but to render Me more odious and contemptible to my People.

I must first appeal to thy Omniscience, who canst witness with my integrity, how unjust and false those scandalous misconstructions are, which my enemies endeavour by those Papers of mine to represent to the world.

Make the evil they imagined, and displeasure they intended thereby against Me, so to return on their own heads that they may be ashamed, and covered with their own confusion, as with a cloak.

Thou seest how mine Enemies use all means to cloud mine Honour, to pervert my purposes, and to slander the footsteps of thine Anointed.

But give Me an heart content to be dishonoured for thy sake, and thy Churches good.

Fix in Me a purpose to honour Thee, and then I know thou wilt honour Me, either by restoring to Me the enjoyment of that Power and Majesty, which Thou hast suffered some men to seek to deprive Me of; or by bestowing on Me that crown of Christian patience, which knows how to serve Thee in honour or dishonour, in good report or evil.

Thou, O Lord, art the fountain of goodnesse, and honour; Thou art clothed with excellent Majestie; make me to partake of thy excellency for wisdom, justice, and mercy, and I shall not want that degree of Honour and Majestie, which becomes the Place in which thou hast set me, who art the lifter up of my head, and my salvation.

Lord, by thy Grace, lead me to thy Glory, which is both true and eternall.

22. Vpon His Majesties leaving Oxford, and going to the Scots.

Although God hath given Me three Kingdoms, yet in these He hath not now left Me any place, where I may with Safetie and Honour rest my Head: Shewing Me that himself is the safe st fest Refuge, and the strongest Tower of defence, in which I may put my Trust.

In these extremities, I look not to man so much as to God: He will have it thus, that I may wholly cast my Self, and my now distressed affairs upon his mercie, who hath both hearts and hands of all men in his dispose.

What Providence denies to Force, it may grant to Prudence: Necessitie is now my Counsellour, and commands Me to studie my safety by a disguised withdrawing from my chiefest strength, and adventuring upon their Loyaltie, who first began my troubles. Happily God may make them a means honourably to compose them.

This my confidence of Them, may disarm and overcome them; my rendring my Person to Them, may engage their affections to Me, who have oft professed, They fought not against Me, but for Me.

I must now resolve the riddle of their Loyaltie, and give them opportunitie to let the world see, they mean not what they do, but what they say.

Yet must God be My chiefest Guard; and My Conscience both My Counsellour and My Comforter: Though I put My Body into their hands, yet I shall reserve My Soul to God, and My Self; nor shall any necessities compell Me, to desert Mine Honour, or swerve from My Judgement.

What

What they sought to take by force, shall now be given them in such a way of usuall confidence of them, as may make them ashamed not to be really such as they ought, and professed to be.

God sees it not enough to deprive Me of all Militarie power to defend My self; but to put Me upon using their power, who seem to fight against Me, yet ought in dutie to defend Me.

So various are all humane affairs, and so necessitous may the state of Princes be, that their greatest danger may be in their supposed safetie, and their safetie in their supposed danger.

I must now leave those, that have adhered to Me, and applie to those that have opposed Me; this method of Peace may be more prosperous, then that of Warre, both to stop the effusion of blood, and to close those wounds already made: and in it I am no lesse solicitous for My Friends safetie, then Mine own; chosing to venture My Self upon further hazards, rather then expose their resolute Loyaltie to all extremities.

It is some skill in play to know when a game is lost; better fairly to give over, then to contest in vain.

I must now studie to reinforce My judgement, and fortifie My mind with Reason and Religion; that I may not seem to offer up My Souls libertie, or make My Conscience their Captive; who ought at first to have used Arguments, not Arms,
to

to have perswaded My consent to their new demands.

I thank God, no successe darkens or disguises Truth to Me; and I shall no lesse conform my words to my inward dictates now, then if they had been, as the words of a KING ought to be among loyall Subjects, full of power.

Reason is the divinest power: I shall never think my Self weakned while I may make full and free use of that. No eclipse of outward fortune shall rob Me of that light; what God hath denied of outward strength, his grace, I hope, will supplie with inward resolutions; not morositie to denie what is fit to be granted, but not to grant any thing, which Reason and Religion bids Me denie.

I shall never think my Self lesse then my Self, while I am able thus to preserve the Integritie of my Conscience, the onely Jewel now left Me, which is worth keeping.

O thou Sovereigne of our Souls, the onely Commander of our Consciences; though I know not what to do, yet mine eyes are towards Thee: To the protection of thy mercy I still commend my Self.

As thou hast preserved me in the day of Battel, so thou canst still shew me thy strength in my weaknesse.

Be thou unto me in my darkest night, a pillar of fire, to enlighten and direct me; in the day of my hottest affliction,

- tion, be also a pillar of cloud to overshadow and protect
- Me; be to Me both a Sunne and a Shield.

Thou knowest, that it is not any perversenesse of will, but just perswasions of Honour, Reason, and Religion, which have made Me thus farre to hazard my Person, Peace, and Safety, against those that by force have sought to wrest them from Me.

- Suffer not my just resolutions to abate with my outward
- Forces; Let a good Conscience alwayes accompany Me, in My greatest solitude and desertions.

Suffer Me not to betray the powers of Reason, and that fortresse of my Soul, which I am intrusted to keep for Thee.

Lead Me in the paths of thy righteousness, and shew Me thy salvation.

- Make my wayes to please Thee, and then thou wilt make Mine Enemies to be at peace with Me.

23. Vpon the Scots delivering the King to the English; and His Captivity at Holmeby.

- YET may I justifie those Scots to all the world in this, that they have not deceived Me, for I never trusted to them further then to men: if I am sold by them, I am onely sorrie they should do it; and that my price should be so much above my Saviours.

- These are but further Essays, which God will have Me make of mans uncertaintie, the more to to fix Me on himself, who never faileth them that trust in him: Though the Reeds of Egypt break under the hand of him that leans on them, yet the Rock of Israel will be an everlasting stay and defence.

Gods providence commands Me to retire from all to himself, that in him I may enjoy my Self, which I lose, while I let out my hopes to others.

The solitude and captivitie, to which I am now reduced, gives Me leisure enough to studie the worlds vanitie and inconstancie.

God sees it fit to deprive Me of Wife, Children, Army, Friends, and Freedome, that I may be wholly his, who alone is all.

I care not much to be reckoned among the Unfortunate, if I be not in the black List of irreligious, and sacrilegious Princes.

No restraint shall ensnare my Soul in sinne, nor gain that of Me, which may make my Enemies more insolent, my Friends ashamed, or my Name accursed.

They have no great cause to triumph, that they have got my Person into their power, since my Soul is still my own; nor shall they ever gain my Consent against my Conscience.

What they call obstinacie, I know God accounts honest constancie, from which Reason and Religion, as well as Honour forbid Me to recede.

'Tis evident now, that it was not evil Counsellours fellours with Me, but a good Conscience in Me, which hath been fought against; nor did they ever intend to bring Me to my Parliament, till they had brought my mind to their obedience.

Should I grant what some men desire, I should be such as they wish Me; not more a King, and farre lesse both Man and Christian.

What Tumults and Armies could not obtain, neither shall Restraint; which though it have as little of safetie to a Prince, yet it hath not more of danger.

The fear of men shall never be my snare; nor shall the love of any libertie entangle my Soul: Better others betray Me, then my Self: and that the price of my libertie should be my Conscience; the greatest injuries my Enemies seek to inflict upon me, cannot be without my own consent

While I can denie with Reason, I shall defeat the greatest impressions of their malice, who neither know how to use worthily, what I have already granted; nor what to require more of Me but this, That I would seem willing to help them to destroy My Self and Mine.

Although they should destroy Me, yet they shall have no cause to despise Me.

Neither libertie nor life are so dear to Me, as the peace of my Conscience, the Honour of my Crowns, and the welfare of my people, which my Word may injure more then any Warre can do; while I gratifie a few to oppresse all: The

The Laws will, by Gods blessing, revive, with the love and Loyaltie of my Subjects; if I burie them not by my consent, and cover them in that grave of dishonour, and injustice, which some mens violence hath digged for them.

If my captivitie or death must be the price of their redemption, I grudge not to pay it.

No condition can make a King miserable, which carries not with it, his Souls; his Peoples, and Posterities thraldome.

After-times may see, what the blindnesse of this Age will not, and God may at length shew my Subjects, that I chose rather to suffer for them, then with them: happily I might redeem my Self to some shew of libertie, if I would consent to enslave them: I had rather hazard the ruine of one King, then to confirm many Tyrants over them; from whom I pray God deliver them, whatever becomes of Me, whose solitude hath not left Me alone.

For Thou, O God, infinitely good, and great, art with Me, whose presence is better then life, and whose service is perfect freedome.

Own Me for thy Servant, and I shall never have cause to complain for want of that liberty, which becomes a Man, a Christian, and a King.

Blesse Me still with Reason, as a Man; with Religion, as a Christian; and with Constancy in Justice, as a King.

Though

Though Thou sufferest Me to be stript of all outward ornaments, yet preserve Me ever in those enjoyments, wherein I may enjoy thy self; and which cannot be taken from Me against My will.

Let no fire of affliction boyl over My passion to any impatience, or sordid fears.

There be many say of Me, There is no help for Me: do thou lift up the light of thy Countenance upon Me, and I shall neither want safety, liberty, nor Majesty.

Give Me that measure of patience and constancy, which my condition now requires.

My strength is scattered, My expectation from Men defeated, My person restrained: O be not thou farre from Me, lest My enemies prevail too much against Me.

I am become a wonder, and a scorn to many: O be thou my Helper and defender.

Shew some token upon Me for good, that they that hate Me may be ashamed, because thou Lord, hast holpen and comforted Me: establish Me with thy free Spirit, that I may do and suffer thy will, as thou wouldst have Me.

Be mercifull to Me, O Lord, for my Soul trusteth in Thee; yea, and in the shadow of thy wings will I make my refuge, untill these calamities be overpast.

Arise to deliver Me, make no long tarrying, O my God. Though thou killest Me, yet will I trust in thy mercy, and my Saviours merit.

I know that my Redeemer liveth, though Thou leadest Me through the vale and shadow of death, yet shall I fear none ill.

24. Vpon their denying His Majesty the Attendance of His Chaplains.

WHen Providence was pleased to deprive Me of all other civill comforts, and secular attendants, I thought the absence of them all might best be supplied by the attendance of some of my Chaplains, whom for their Function I reverence, and for their Fidelitie I have cause to love. By their learning, pietie, and prayers, I hoped to be either better enabled to sustain the want of all other enjoyments, or better fitted for the recovery and use of them in Gods good time: so reaping by their pious help a spirituall harvest of grace amidst the thorns, and after the ploughings of temporall crosses.

The truth is, I never needed or desired more the service and assistance of men judiciously pious, and soberly devout.

The solitude they have confined Me unto, adds the Wildernesse to my temptations: For the company they obtrude upon Me, is more sad then any solitude can be.

If I had asked my Revenues, my Power of the Militia, or any one of my Kingdoms, it had been no wonder to have been denied in those things, where the evil policy of men forbids all just restitution, least they should confesse an injurious usurpation: But to deny Me the Ghostly comfort of my Chaplains, seems a greater rigour and barbarity, then is ever used by Christians to the meanest Prisoners, and greatest Malefactours; whom though the Justice of the Law deprive of worldly comforts, yet the mercy of Religion allows them the benefit of their Clergie, as not aiming at once to destroy their Bodies, and to damne their Souls.

But my Agony must not be relieved with the presence of any one good Angel; for such I account a Learned, Godly, and discreet Divine: and such I would have all mine to be.

They that envy my being a King, are loth I should be a Christian; while they seek to deprive Me of all things else, they are afraid I should save my soul.

Other sense, Charity it self can hardly pick out of those many harsh repulses I received, as to that request so often made for the attendance of some of my Chaplains.

I have sometime thought the unchristiannesse of those denials, might arise from a displeasure some men had to see Me prefer my own Divines, before their Ministers: whom, though I respect for that worth and piety which may be in them; yet I cannot think them so proper for any present comforters or Physicians; who have (some of them at least) had so great an influence in occasioning these calamities, and inflicting these wounds upon Me.

Nor

Nor are the soberest of them so apt for that devotionall compliance, and juncture of hearts, which I desire to bear in those holy Offices to be performed with Me, and for Me; since their judgements standing at a distance from Me, or in jealousy of Me, or in opposition against Me, their Spirits cannot so harmoniously accord with mine, or mine with theirs, either in Prayer, or other holy duties, as is meet and most comfortable, whose golden Rule, and bond of Perfection consists in that of mutuall Love and Charity.

Some remedies are worse then the disease, and some comforters more miserable then miserie it self; when like Jobs friends, they seek not to fortifie ones mind with patience; but perswade a man by betraying his own Innocency, to despair of Gods mercy, and by justifying their injuries, to strengthen the hands, and harden the hearts of Insolent Enemies.

I am so much a friend to all Church-men, that have any thing in them becomming that sacred Function, that I have hazarded my own Interests, chiefly upon Conscience and Constancy to maintain their Rights, whom the more I looked upon as Orphans, and under the sacrilegious eyes of many cruel and rapacious Reformers; so I thought it my duty the more to appear as a Father, and a Patron for them and the Church. Although I am very unhandsomly requited by some of them ; who may live to repent no lesse for my sufferings , then their own ungratefull errours, and that injurious contempt and meannesse, which they have brought upon their Calling and Persons.

I pitie all of them , I despise none : onely I thought I might have leave to make choice of some for my speciall Attendants, who were best approved in my Judgement, and most sutable to my affection : For, I held it better to seem undevout, and to hear no mens prayers, then to be forced, or seem to comply with those petitions, to which the heart cannot consent , nor the tongue say Amen, without contradicting a mans own understanding, or belying his own soul.

In Devotions, I love neither profane boldnesse, non pious non-sense; but such an humble and judicious gravity, as shews the Speaker to be at once considerate both of Gods Majestie, the Churches honour, and his own vilenesse; knowing whatthings God allows him to ask, and in what manner it becomes a Sinner, to supplicate the Divine Mercy for himself and others.

I am equally scandalized with all prayers, that sound either imperiously, rudely, and passionately; as either wanting humility to God, or charitie to men, or respect to the duty.

I confesse, I am better pleased, as with studied and premeditated Sermons , so with such Publick

- whose pietie hung upon that popular pin of rayling against, and contemning the Government and Liturgie of this Church. But, I had rather
- be condemned to the wo of Væ soli, then to that
- of Væ vobis Hypocritis, by seeming to pray what I do not approve.

It may be, I am esteemed by my Deniers sufficient of my Self to discharge my duty to God as a Priest, though not to Men as a Prince.

- Indeed, I think both Offices, Regall and Sacerdotal, might well become the same person, as anciently they were under one name, and the united rights of primogeniture: Nor could I follow better presidents, if I were able, then those two eminent Kings, David and Salomon; not more famous for their Sceptres and Crowns, then one was for devout Psalms and Prayers, the other for his Divine Parables and preaching: whence the one merited and assumed the name of a Prophet, the other of a Preacher. Titles indeed of greater honour, where rightly placed, then any of those the Romane Emperours affected from the Nations they subdued: it being infinitely more glorious, to
- convert Souls to Gods Church by the Word, then
 - to conquer men to a subjection by the Sword.

Yet since the order of Gods wisdome and providence hath, for the most part, alwayes distinguished the gifts and offices of Kings, of Priests, of Princes and Preachers; both in the Jewish and

Chri-

Christian Churches: I am sorry to find my Self reduced to the necessity of being both, or enjoying neither.

For such as seek to deprive Me of Kingly power and Sovereignty, would no lesse enforce Me to live many months without all prayers, Sacraments, and Sermons, unless I become mine own Chaplain.

As I ow the Clergy the protection of a Christian KING, so I desire to enjoy from them the benefit of their gifts and praiers; which I look upon as more prevalent then my own or other mens, by how much they flow from minds more enlightened, and affections lesse distracted, then those, which are incombred with Secular affairs: besides, I think a greater blessing and acceptableness attends those duties which are rightly performed, as proper to, and within the limits of that calling, to which God and the Church have specially designed and consecrated some men: And however, as to the spirituall government, by which the devout Soul is subject to Christ, & through his merits daily offers it self and its services to God, every private believer is a King and a Priest, invested with the honour of a royal Priesthood; yet as to Ecclesiastical order, and the outward polity of the Church, I think confusion in Religion will as certainly follow every mans turning Priest or Preacher, as it will in the State, where every one affects to rule as King.

I was alwayes bred to more modest, and I think more pious Principles: the conscioufnesse to my spirituall defects, makes Me more prize and desire those pious assistances, which holy & good Ministers, either Bishops or Presbyters, may afford Me; especially in these extremities, to which God hath been pleased to suffer some of my Subjects to reduce Me; so as to leave them nothing more but my life to take from Me, and to leave Me nothing to desire, which I thought might lesse provoke their jealousie and offence to deny Me, then this, of having some means afforded Me for my souls comfort and support.

To which end I made choice of men, as no way (that I know) scandalous, so every way eminent for their learning and pietie, no lesse then for their Loyaltie: nor can I imagine any exceptions to be made against them, but onely this, that they may seem too able and too well affected toward Me and my service.

But this is not the first service (as I count it the best) in which they have forced Me to serve my Self; though I must confesse I bear with more grief and impatience the want of my Chaplains, then of any other my Servants, and next (if not beyond in some things) to the being sequestred from my Wife and Children, since from these indeed more of humane and temporarie affections, but from those more of heavenly and eternall improvements may be expected.

My

My comfort is, that in the inforced (not neglected) want of ordinarie means, God is wont to afford extraordinarie supplies of his gifts and graces.

If his Spirit will teach Me, and help my infirmities in praier, reading, and meditation, (as I hope he will) I shall need no other, either Orator or Instructor.

To Thee therefore, O my God, do I direct My now solitary prayers; what I want of others help, supplie with the more immediate assistances of thy Spirit, which alone can both enlighten My darknesse, and quicken My dulnesse.

O thou Sun of righteousness, thou sacred Fountain of heavenly light and heat, at once clear and warm my heart, both by instructing of me, and interceding for me: In Thee is all fulnesse; From Thee all sufficiency: By Thee is all acceptance. Thou art company enough, and comfort enough: Thou art my King, be also my Prophet and my Priest. Rule me, teach me, pray in me, for me, and be thou ever with me.

The single wrestlings of Jacob prevailed with Thee, in that sacred Duell, when he had none to second him but thy Self; who didst assist him with power to overcome thee, and by a welcome violence to wrest a blessing from thee.

O look on me thy Servant, in infinite mercy, whom thou didst once blesse with the joynt and sociated Devotions of others,

others, whose fervencie might inflame the coldnesse of my affections towards thee; when we went to, or met in thy House with the voice of joy and gladnesse, worshipping thee in the unity of spirits, and with the bond of Peace.

O forgive the neglect, and not improving those happy opportunities.

It is now thy pleasure that I should be as a Pelican in the wilderness, as a Sparrow on the house top, and as a coal scattered from all those pious glowings, and devout reflections, which might best kindle, preserve, and increase the holy fire of thy graces on the Altar of my heart, whence the sacrifice of prayers, and incense of praises, might be duly offered up to thee.

Yet, O thou that breakest not the bruised Reed, nor quenchest the smoking Flax, do not despise the weaknesse of my prayers, nor the smotherings of my Soul in this uncomfortable lonenesse; to which I am constrained by some mens uncharitable denials of those helps, which I much want, and no lesse desire.

O let the hardnesse of their hearts occasion the softnings of mine to Thee, and for Them. Let their hatred kindle my love, let their unreasonable denials of my Religious desires, the more excite my prayers to thee. Let their inexorable deafnesse incline thine eare to me; who art a God easie to be entreated; thine eare is not heavy, that it cannot, nor thy heart hard, that it will not heare; nor thy hand shortened, that it cannot help Me thy desolate Suppliant.

Thou

Thou permittest men to deprive me of those outward means, which thou hast appointed in thy Church; but they cannot debarre me from the communion of that inward grace, which thou alone breathest into humble hearts.

O make me such, and thou wilt teach me; thou wilt heare me, thou wilt help me: The broken and contrite heart I know thou wilt not despise.

Thou, O Lord, canst at once make me thy Temple, thy Priest, thy Sacrifice, and thine Altar; while from an humble heart (I alone) daily offer up in holy meditations, fervent prayers, and unfeigned tears my self to thee; who preparest me for thee, dwellest in me, and acceptest of me.

Thou, O Lord, didst cause by secret supplies and miraculous infusions, that the handfull of meal in the vessel should not spend, nor the little oyl in the cruise fail the Widow, during the time of drought and dearth.

O look on my soul, which as a Widow, is now desolate and forsaken: let not those saving Truths I have formerly learned now fail my memory; nor the sweet effusions of thy Spirit, which I have sometime felt, now be wanting to my heart in this famine of ordinary and wholesome food, for the refreshing of my Soul.

Which yet I had rather choose, then to feed from those hands who mingle my bread with ashes, and my wine with gall; rather tormenting, then teaching me; whose mouthes are proner to bitter reproches of me, then to hearty prayers for me.

Thou knowest, O Lord of truth, how oft they wrest thy holy Scriptures to My destruction, (which are clear for their

their subjection, and my preservation) O let it not be to their damnation.

Thou knowest how some men (under colour of long prayers) have sought to devoure the houses of their Brethren, their King, and their God.

O let not those mens balms break my head, nor their Cordialls oppresse my heart: I will evermore pray against their wickednesse.

From the poyson under their tongues, from the snares of their lips, from the fire, and the swords of their words, ever deliver Me, O Lord, and all those Loyall and Religious hearts, who desire and delight in the prosperity of my soul, and who seek by their prayers to relieve this sadnesse, and solitude of thy Servant, O my King, and my God.

25. Penitentiall Meditations and Vows in the KINGs solitude at Holmeby.

GIve eare to my words, O Lord, consider my Meditation, and hearken to the voice of my cry, my King and my God, for unto thee will I pray.

I said in my haste, I am cast out of the sight of thine eyes; neverthelesse thou hearest the voice of my supplication, when I cry unto thee.

If thou Lord shouldst be extreme to mark what is done amisse, who can abide it? But there is mercy with thee, that thou mayest be feared; therefore shall sinners fly unto thee.

I acknowledge my sins before thee, which have the aggravation of my condition, the eminency of my place, adding weight to my offences.

Forgive

Forgive, I beseech thee, my Personall and my Peoples sins, which are so farre mine, as I have not improved the power thou gavest Me, to thy glory and my Subjects good: Thou hast now brought me from the glory and freedome of a King, to be a Prisoner to my own Subjects: Fustly, O Lord, as to thy overruling hand, because in many things I have rebelled against thee.

Though thou hast restrained My Person; yet enlarge my heart to thee, and thy grace towards Me.

I come farre short of Davids piety; yet since I may equall Davids afflictions, give me also the comforts and the sure mercies of David.

Let the penitent sence I have of my sins, be an evidence to me, that thou hast pardoned them.

Let not the evils, which I and my Kingdomes have suffered, seem little unto thee; though thou hast not punished us according to our sins.

Turn thee, (O Lord) unto me, have mercy upon me, for I am desolate and afflicted.

The sorrows of my heart are enlarged, O bring me out of my troubles.

Hast thou forgotten to be gracious, and shut up thy loving kindnesse in displeasure?

O remember thy compassions of old, and thy loving kindnesse, which have been for many generations.

I had utterly fainted, if I had not believed to see thy goodnesse in the land of the living.

Let not the sins of our prosperity deprive us of the benefit of thy afflictions.

Let

Let this fiery triall consume the drosse, which in long peace and plenty we had contracted.

Though thou continuest miseries, yet withdraw not thy grace; what is wanting of prosperity, make up in patience and repentance.

And if thy anger be not yet to be turned away, but thy hand of justice must be stretched out still; Let it, I beseech thee, be against me, and my Fathers house: as for these sheep, what have they done.

Let my sufferings satiate the malice of mine, and thy Churches enemies?

But let their cruelty never exceed the measure of my charity.

Banish from me all thoughts of Revenge; that I may not lose the reward, nor thou the glory of my patience.

As thou givest me a heart to forgive them, so I beseech thee, do thou forgive what they have done against thee and me.

And now, O Lord, as thou hast given me an heart to pray unto thee; so heare and accept this Vow, which I make before thee.

If thou wilt in mercy remember Me, and My Kingdoms; In continuing the light of thy Gospel, and settling thy true Religion among us:

In restoring us to the benefit of the Laws, and the due execution of Justice:

In suppressing the many Schismes in Church, and Factions in State:

If thou wilt restore me and mine to the Ancient rights and glory of my Predecessours: If

If thou wilt turn the hearts of my people to thy self in Piety, to me in Loyalty, and to one another in Charitie:

If thou wilt quench the flames, and withdraw the fewel of these Civil Warres:

If thou wilt blesse us with the freedome of publick Counsels, and deliver the Honour of Parliaments from the insolencie of the vulgar:

If thou wilt keep me from the great offence of enacting any thing against my Conscience; and especially from consenting to sacrilegious rapines, and spoilings of thy Church:

If thou wilt restore me to a capacity to glorifie thee in doing good, both to the Church and State:

Then shall my soul praise thee, and magnifie thy name before my People.

Then shall thy glory be dearer to me then my Crowns; and the advancement of true Religion both in purity and power, be my chiefeſt care.

Then will I rule my People with justice, and my Kingdoms with equity.

To thy more immediate hand shall I ever own, as the rightfull succession, so the mercifull restauration of my Kingdoms, and the glory of them.

If thou wilt bring Me again with peace, safety, and honour, to My chiefeſt City, and my Parliament:

If thou wilt again put the Sword of Justice into my hand, to punish and protect:

Then will I make all the world to see, and my very Enemies to enjoy the benefit of this Vow and resolution of Christian charity, which I now make unto thee, O Lord.

As

As I do freely pardon for Christ's sake those that have offended me in any kind, so my hand shall never be against any man to revenge what is past, in regard of any particular injury done to me.

We have been mutually punished in our unnaturall divisions; for thy sake, O Lord, and for the love of my Redeemer, have I purposed this in my heart, That I will use all means in the wayes of amnesty, and indempnitie, which may most fully remove all fears, and bury all jealousies in forgetfulnesse.

Let thy mercies be toward Me and Mine, as my resolutions of Truth and Peace are toward my People.

Heare my prayer, O Lord, which goeth not out of feigned lips.

Blessed be God, who hath not turned away my prayer, nor taken his mercy from me.

O my soul, commit thy way to the Lord, trust in him, and he shall bring it to passe.

But if thou wilt not restore me and mine, what am I that I should charge thee foolishly?

Thou, O Lord, hast given, and thou hast taken, Blessed be thy name.

May my People and thy Church be happy, if not by me, yet without me.

26. *Vpon the Armies Surprisall of the KING
at Holmeby, and the ensuing distractions in the two Houses, the Army, and the City.*

WHat part God will have Me now to act or suffer, in this new and strange scene of affairs, I am not much solicitous: some little practise will serve that man, who onely seeks to represent a part of honesty and honour.

This surprize of Me tells the world, that a KING cannot be so low, but He is considerable; adding weight to that Partie where he appears.

This motion, like others of the Times, seems excentrique and irregular, yet not well to be resisted or quieted: Better swim down such a stream, then in vain to strive against it.

These are but the struglings of those twins, which lately one womb enclosed, the younger striving to prevail against the elder; what the Presbyterians have hunted after, the Independents now seek to catch for themselves.

So impossible is it for lines to be drawn from the centre, and not to divide from each other, so much the wider, by how much they go farther from the point of Union.

That the Builders of Babel should from division fall to confusion, is no wonder; but for those that pretend to build Jerusalem, to divide their tongues and hands, is but an ill omen, and sounds too like the fury of those Zealots, whose intestine bitternesse and divisions, were the greatest occasion of the last fatall destruction of that City.
P that

Well may I change my Keepers and Prison, but not my captive condition, onely with this hope of bettering, that those who are so much professed Patrons for the Peoples Liberties, cannot be utterly against the Libertie of their KING; what they demand for their own Consciences, they cannot in Reason denie to Mine.

In this they seem more ingenuous, then the Presbyterian rigour, who sometimes complaining of exacting their conformitie to Laws, are become the greatest Exactours of other mens submission to their novel injunctions, before they are stamped with the Authority of Laws, which they cannot well have without my consent.

'Tis a great argument, that the Independents think themselves manumitted from their Rivals service, in that they carry on a businesse of such consequence, as the assuming my Person into the Armies custody, without any Commission, but that of their own will and power. Such as will thus adventure on a KING, must not be thought over-modest, or timorous to carry on any designe they have a mind to.

Their next motion, menaces and scares both
the

the two Houses and the City : which soon-after acting over again that former part of tumultuary motions, (never questioned, punished, or repented) must now suffer for both, & see their former sin in the glasse of the present terrours and distractions.

No man is so blind as not to see herein the hand of Divine Justice; they that by Tumults first occasioned the raising of Armies, must now be chastened by their own Army for new Tumults.

So hardly can men be content with one sin, but adde sin to sin, till the latter punish the former: such as were content to see Me and many Members of both Houses driven away, by the first unsuppressed Tumults, are now forced to flie to an Armie, or defend themselves against them.

But who can unfold the riddle of some mens justice? the Members of both Houses who at first withdrew, (as my Self was forced to do) from the rudenesse of the tumults, were counted deserters, and outed of their places in Parliament.

Such as stayer then, and enjoyed the benefit of the tumults, were asserted for the onely Parliament men: now the fliers from, and forsakers of their Places, carry the Parliamentary power along with them, complain highly against the tumults, and vindicate themselves by an Army: such as remained and kept their stations, are looked upon as Abettours of tumultuary insolence.

cies, and betrayers of the Freedome and honour of Parliament.

Thus is Power above all Rule, Order, and Law, where men look more to present advantages, then their Consciences, and the unchangeable rules of Justice: while they are judges of others, they are forced to condemn themselves.

Now the plea against Tumults holds good, the Authours and Abettours of them are guilty of prodigious insolencies, when as before, they were counted as Friends, and necessarie Assistants.

I see Vengeance pursues and overtakes (as the Mice and Rats are said to have done a Bishop in Germany) them that thought to have escaped and fortified themselves most impreguably against it, both by their multitude and compliance.

Whom the Laws cannot, God will punish, by their own crimes and hands.

I cannot but observe this Divine Justice, yet with sorrow and pity: for I alwayes wished so well to Parliament and Citie, that I was sorrie to see them do, or suffer any thing unworthy such great and considerable bodies in this Kingdome.

I was glad to see them onely scared and humbled, not broken by that shaking: I never had so ill a thought of those Cities, as to despair of their Loyaltie to Me; which mistakes might eclipse, but I never believed malice had quite put
I

I pray God the storm be yet wholly passed over them, upon whom I look, as Christ did sometime over Jerusalem, as objects of my Prayers and tears, with compassionate grief foreseeing those severer scatterings, which will certainly befall such as wantonly refuse to be gathered to their duty: fatall blindness frequently attending and punishing wilfulness, so that men shall not be able at last, to prevent their sorrows, who would not timely repent of their sins; nor shall they be suffered to enjoy the comforts, who securely neglect the counsels belonging to their peace. They wil find, that brethren in iniquity are not far from becoming insolent enemies, there being nothing harder, then to keep ill men long in one mind.

Nor is it possible to gain a fair period for those notions which go rather in a round and circle of fansie, then in a right line of Reason tending to the Law, the onely centre of publick consistency; whither I pray God at last bring all sides.

Which will easily be done, when we shall fully see how much more happy we are, to be subject to the known Laws, then to the various wills of any men, seem they never so plausible at first.

Vulgar compliance with any illegall and extravagant wayes, like violent motions in nature, soon grows weary of it self, and ends in a refractorie sullenness: Peoples rebounds are oft in their faces, who first put them upon those violent strokes.

For the Army (which is so farre excusable, as they act according to Souldiers principles, and interests, demanding Pay and Indemnities) I think it necessary, in order to the publick Peace, that they should be satisfied, as far as is just; no man being more prone to consider them then my Self: though they have fought against Me, yet I cannot but so farre esteem that valour and gallantry they have sometime shewed, as to wish I may never want such men to maintain my Self, my Laws, and my Kingdoms, in such a peace, as wherein they may enjoy their share and proportion as much as any men.

But Thou, O Lord, who art perfect Unity in a sacred Trinity, in mercy behold those, whom thy Justice hath divided.

Deliver Me from the strivings of my People, and make Me to see how much they need my prayers and pitie, who agreed to fight against Me, and yet are now ready to fight against one another, to the continuance of my Kingdoms distractions.

Discover to all sides the wayes of Peace, from which they have swarved; which consists not in the divided wils of parties, but in the joint & due observation of the Laws

Make Me willing to go whither thou wilt lead Me by thy Providence; and be Thou ever with Me, that I may see thy constancie in the worlds variety and changes.

Make Me even such as Thou wouldst have Me, that I may

may at last enjoy that safety and tranquility, which Thou alone canst give Me.

Divert, I pray thee, O Lord, thy heavy wrath justly hanging over those populous Cities, whose plenty is prone to adde fuel to their luxury, their wealth to make them wanton, their multitudes tempting them to security, and their security exposing them to unexpected miseries.

Give them eyes to see, hearts to consider, wils to embrace, and courage to act those things which belong to Thy Glory and the Publick Peace, least their calamity come upon them as an armed man.

Teach them, that they cannot want enemies, who abound in sinne, nor shall they be long undisarmed and undestroyed, who with a high hand persisting to fight against Thee, and the clear convictions of their own consciences, fight more against themselves, then ever they did against me

Their sinnes exposing them to thy Justice, their riches to others injuries, their number to tumults, and their tumults to confusion.

Though they have with much forwardnesse helped to destroy Me, yet let not my fall be their ruine.

Let Me not so much consider, either what they have done, or I have suffered, (chiefly at first by them) as to forget to imitate my crucified Redeemer, to plead their ignorance for their pardon; and in my dying extremities to pray to Thee, O Father, to forgive them, for they knew not what they did.

The tears they have denied Me in my saddest condition, give them grace to bestow upon themselves, who the lesse they were for Me, the more cause they have to weep for themselves.

O let not my blood be upon them and their Children, whom the fraud and faction of some, not the malice of all, have excited to crucifie Me.

But Thou, O Lord, canst, and wilt (as Thou didst my Redeemer) both exalt and perfect Me by my sufferings, which have more in them of thy mercy, then of mans cruelty, or thy own justice.

27. To the Prince of VVales.

SON, if these Papers, with some others, wherein I have set down the private reflections of my Conscience, and my most impartial thoughts, touching the chief passages, which have been most remarkable or disputed in my late troubles, come to your hands, to whom they are chiefly designed; they may be so farre usefull to You, as to state your judgement aright in what hath passed; whereof, a pious is the best use can be made: and they may also give you some directions, how to remedie the present distempers, and prevent (if God will) the like for time to come.

It is some kind of deceiving and lessening the injurie of my long restraint, when I find my leisure and solitude have produced something worthy of my Self, and usefull to you: That neither you, nor any other, may hereafter measure my Cause

Natus Maij 29. An. 1630. Etatis suæ 19.

Cause by the Successe ; nor my Judgement of things by my misfortunes ; which I count the greater by farre, because they have so farre lighted upon you, and some others, whom I have most cause to love as well as my Self; and of whose unmerited sufferings I have a greater sense then of mine own.

But this advantage of wisdome you have above most Princes ; that you have begun, and now spent some years of discretion, in the experience of troubles, and exercise of patience, wherein Pietie, and all Virtues, both Morall and Politicall, are commonly better planted to a thriving, (as trees set in winter) then in the warmth, and serenitie of times, or amidst those delights, which usually attend Princes Courts in times of peace and plentie; which are prone, either to root up all plants of true Virtue and Honour ; or to be contented onely with some leaves, and withering formalities of them, without any reall fruits, such as tend to the publick good; for which Princes should alwaies remember they are born, and by providence designed.

The evidence of which different education, the holie Writ affords us in the contemplation of David and Rehoboam : The one prepared, by many afflictions for a flourishing Kingdome, the other softened by the unparallel'd prosperitie of Solomons Court ; and so corrupted to the great diminution, diminution, both for Peace, Honour, and Kingdom, by those flatteries, which are as unseparable from Prosperous Princes, as Flies are from fruit in summer; whom adversitie, like cold weather drives away.

I had rather you should be Charles le bon, then le Grand, good, then great: I hope God hath designed you to be both, having so early put you into that exercise of his Graces, and Gifts bestowed upon you, which may best weed out all vicious inclinations, and dispose you to those Princely endowments, and employments, which will most gain the love, and intend the welfare of those, over whom God shall place you.

With God I would have you begin and end, who is King of Kings; the Sovereigne disposer of the Kingdoms of the world, who pulleth down one, and setteth up another.

The best Government, and highest Sovereignty you can attain to is, to be subject to him, that that the Sceptre of his Word and Spirit may rule in your heart.

The true glorie of Princes consists in advancing Gods Glorie, in the maintenance of true Religion, and the Churches good: Also in the dispensation of civil Power, with Justice and Honour to the publick Peace.

Pietie will make you prosperous; at least it will keep you from being miserable: nor is he much much a loser, that loseth all, yet saveth his own soul at last.

To which Centre of true Happinesse, God, I trust, hath and will graciously direct all these black lines of Affliction, which he hath been pleased to draw on Me, and by which he hath (I hope) drawn Me nearer to himself. You have already tasted of that cup whereof I have liberally drank, which I look upon as Gods Physick, having that in healthfulnesse, which it wants in pleasure.

Above all, I would have you, as I hope you are already, well-grounded and settled in your Religion: The best profession of which, I have ever esteemed that of the Church of England, in which you have been educated; yet I would have your own Judgement and Reason now seal to that sacred bond which education hath written, that it may be judiciously your own Religion, and not other mens custome or tradition, which you professe.

In this I charge you to persevere, as coming nearest to Gods Word for Doctrine, and to the primitive examples for Government, with some little amendment, which I have elsewhere expressed, and often offered, though in vain. Your fixation in matters of Religion, will not be more necessarie for your souls, then your Kingdoms peace, when God shall bring you to them.

For

For I have observed, that the Devil of Rebellion, doth commonly turn himself into an Angel of Reformation; and the old Serpent can pretend new Lights: When some mens Consciences accuse them for Sedition and Faction, they stop its mouth with the name and noise of Religion; when Pietie pleads for peace and patience, they crie out Zeal.

So that, unlesse in this point You be well settled, you shall never want temptations to destroy you and yours, under pretensions of reforming matters of Religion; for that seems, even to worst men, as the best and most auspicious beginning of their worst designs.

Where, besides the Noveltie which is taking enough with the Vulgar, everie one hath an affectation, by seeming forward to an outward Reformation of Religion, to be thought zealous; hoping to cover those irreligious deformities, whereto they are conscious by a severitie of censuring other mens opinions or actions.

Take heed of abetting any Factions, or applying to any publick Discriminations in matters of Religion, contrary to what is in your Judgment, and the Church well settled; your partiall adhering, as head, to any one side, gains you not so great advantages in some mens hearts, (who are prone to be of their Kings Religion) as it loseth you in others; who think themselves, and their profession first despised, then persecuted by you. Take such a course, as may either with calmnesse and charitie quite remove the seeming differences and offences by impartialitie; or so order affairs in point of Power, that you shall not need to fear or flatter any Faction. For if ever you stand in need of them, or must stand to their courtesie, you are undone: The Serpent will devoure the Dove: you may never expect lesse of loyaltie, justice, or humanitie, then from those, who engage into religious Rebellion: Their interest is alwaies made Gods; under the colours of Pietie, ambitious policies march, not onely with greatest securitie, but applause, as to the populace; you may heare from them Jacobs voice, but you shall feel they have Esau's hands.
and

Nothing seemed lesse considerable then the Presbyterian Faction in England, for many years; so compliant they were to publick order: nor indeed was their Partie great either in Church, or State, as to mens judgements: but as soon as discontents drave men into Sidings (as ill humours fall to the disaffected part, which causes inflammations) so did all, at first, who affected any novelties, adhere to that Side, as the most remarkable and specious note of difference (then) in point of Religion.

All the lesser Factions at first were officious Servants to Presbyterie, their great Master: till time
and

and militarie successe discovering to each their peculiar advantages, invited them to part stakes, and leaving the joynt stock of uniform Religion, pretended each to drive for their Partie the trade of profits and preferments, to the breaking and undoing not onely of the Church and State, but even of Presbyterie it self, which seemed and hoped at first to have ingrossed all.

Let nothing seem little or despicable to you in matters which concern Religion & the Churches peace, so as to neglect a speedie reforming and effectuall suppressing Errours and Schismes, which seem at first but as a hand-breadth, yet by seditious Spirits, as by strong winds, are soon made to cover and darken the whole Heaven.

When you have done justice to God, your own soul, and his Church, in the profession and preservation both of truth and unitie in Religion; the next main hinge on which your prosperitie will depend, and move, is, that of Civil Justice, wherein the settled Laws of these Kingdoms, to which you are rightly Heire, are the most excellent rules you can govern by; which by an admirable temperament give very much to Subjects industrie, libertie, and happinesse; and yet reserve enough to the Majestie and prerogative of any King, who owns his People as Subjects, not as Slaves; whose subjection, as it preserves their propertie, peace, and safetie, so it will never diminish diminish your Rights, nor their ingenuous Liberties; which consists in the enjoyment of the fruits of their industrie, and the benefit of those Laws to which themselves have consented.

Never charge your Head with such a Crown, as shall by its heavinessse oppresse the whole bodie, the weaknesse of whose parts cannot return any thing of strength, honour, or safetie, to the Head, but a necessary debilitation and ruine.

Your Prerogative is best shewed, and exercised in remitting, rather then exacting the rigour of the Laws; there being nothing worse then legall Tyrannie.

In these two points, the preservation of established Religion, and Laws, I may (without vanitie) turn the reproch of My sufferings, as to the worlds censure, into the honour of a kind of Martyrdome, as to the testimony of My own Conscience: The Troublers of My Kingdoms having nothing else to object against Me, but this, That I preferre Religion, and Laws established, before those alterations they propounded.

And so indeed I do, and ever shall, till I am convinced by better Arguments, then what hitherto have been chiefly used towards Me; Tumults, Armies, and Prisons.

I cannot yet learn that lesson, nor I hope ever will you, That it is safe for a King to gratifie any Faction with the perturbation of the Laws,

in

in which is wrapt up the publick Interest , and the good of the Communitie.

How God will deal with Me , as to the removal of these pressures, and indignities, which his justice by the very unjust hands of some of My Subjects, hath been pleased to lay upon Me, I cannot tell: nor am I much solicitous what wrong I suffer from men, while I retain in My soul, what I believe is right before God.

I have offered all for Reformation and Safetie, that in Reason, Honour, and Conscience I can; reserving onely what I cannot consent unto, without an irreparable injurie to My own Soul, the Church, and My People, and to You also, as the next and undoubted Heire of My Kingdoms.

To which if the divine Providence, to whom no difficulties are insuperable, shall in his due time after My decease bring You , as I hope he will; My counsell and charge to You , is, That You seriously consider the former, reall, or objected miscarriages , which might occasion My troubles, that You may avoid them.

Never repose so much upon any mans single counsel, fidelitie, and discretion, in managing affairs of the first magnitude (that is, matters of Religion and Justice) as to create in Your self, or others, a diffidence of Your own judgement, which is likely to be alwaies more constant and impartial to the interests of your Crown and Kingdome, then any mans.

Next,

Next beware of exasperating any Factions by crossenesse and asperity of some mens passions, humours, or private opinions, imployed by you, grounded onely upon the differences in lesser matters, which are but the skirts and suburbs of Religion.

Wherein a charitable connivence and Christian toleration often dissipates their strength, when rougher opposition fortifies; and puts the despised and oppressed Partie, into such Combinations, as may most enable them to get a full revenge on those they count their Persecutors, who are commonly assisted by that vulgar commiseration, which attends all that are said to suffer under the notion of Religion.

Provided, the differences amount not to an insolent opposition of Laws and Government, or Religion established, as to the essentials of them, such motions and minings are intolerable.

Alwayes keep up solid piety, and those fundamentall Truths, (which mend both hearts and lives of men) with impartiall favour and justice.

Take heed that outward circumstances and formalities of Religion devour not all, or the best encouragements of learning, industry, and pietie; but with an equal eye and impartiall hand, distribute favours and rewards to all men, as you find them for their real goodnesse, both in abilities and fidelitie, worthy and capable of them.

Q

This

This will be sure to gain you the hearts of the best, and the most too; who, though they be not good themselves, yet are glad to see the severer wayes of virtue at any time, sweetned by temporall rewards.

I have, you see, conflicted with different and opposite Factions; (for so I must needs call and count all those, that act not in any conformitie to the Laws established in Church and State) no sooner have they by force subdued what they counted their Common Enemy, (that is, all those that adhered to the Laws, and to Me) and are secured from that fear, but they are divided to so high a rivaltie, as sets them more at defiance against each other, then against their first Antagonists.

Time will dissipate all Factions, when once the rough horns of private mens covetous and ambitious designs, shall discover themselves; which were at first wrapt up and hidden under the soft and smooth pretensions of Religion, Reformation, and Liberty: As the Wolf is not lesse cruel, so he will be more justly hated, when he shall appear no better then a Wolf under Sheeps clothing.

But as for the seduced train of the Vulgar, who in their simplicity follow those disguises; my charge and counsel to you, is, That as you need no palliations for any designs (as other men) so that you study really to exceed (in true and constant demonstrations of goodnes, piety, and virtue towards the People) even all those men, that make the greatest noise and ostentations of Religion: so you shall neither fear any detection (as they do, who have but the face & mask of goodnes) nor shall you frustrate the just expectations of your people; who cannot in reason promise themselves so much good from any subjects novelties, as from the virtuous constancy of their King.
that

When these mountains of congealed Factions, shall by the Sunshine of Gods mercie, and the splendour of your virtues, be thawed and dissipated, and the abused Vulgar shall have learned, that none are greater Oppressours of their Estates, Liberties, and Consciences, that those men, that entitle themselves, The Patrons and Vindicatours of them, onely to usurp power over them: Let then no passion betray you to any study of revenge upon those, whose own sinne and folly will sufficiently punish them in due time.

But as soon as the forked arrow of factious emulations is drawn out, use all Princely arts, and clemencie to heal the wounds; that the smart of the cure may not equal the anguish of the hurt.

I have offered Acts of Indemnitie, and Oblivion, to so great a latitude, as may include all, that can but suspect themselves to be any way obnoxious to the Laws; and which might serve to exclude all future jealousies and insecurities.

I would have you alwayes propense to the same way, when ever it shall be desired and accepted, let it be granted ; not onely as an act of State policy and necessity, but of Christian charitie and choice.

It is all I have now left Me, a power to forgive those, that have deprived Me of all; and I thank God, I have a heart to do it; and joy as much in this grace, which God hath given Me, as in all my former enjoyments; for this is a greater argument of Gods love to Me, then any prosperity can be.

Be confident (as I am) that the most of all sides, who have done amisse, have done so, not out of malice, but mis-information, or mis-apprehension of things.

None will be more loyall and faithfull to Me, and You, then those Subjects, who sensible of their Errours, and our Injuries, will feel in their own souls most vehement motives to repentance, and earnest desires to make some reparations for their former defects.

As Your qualitie sets you beyond any duel with any Subject, so the noblenesse of Your mind must raise you above the meditating any revenge, or executing your anger upon the many.

The more conscious You shall be to your own merits upon your People, the more prone you

you will be to expect all love and loyaltie from them, and to inflict no punishment upon them for former miscarriages: You will have more inward complacency in pardoning one, then in punishing a thousand.

This I write to you, not despairing of Gods mercy, and my Subjects affections towards You; both which I hope you will study to deserve, yet we cannot merit of God, but by his own mercy.

If God shall see fit to restore Me, and You after Me, to those enjoyments, which the Laws have assigned to Us, and no Subjects without an high degree of guilt and sinne can develt Us of; then may I have better opportunity, when I shall be so happy to see You in peace, to let You more fully understand the things that belong to Gods glory, Your own Honour, and the Kingdoms peace.

But if You never see my face again, and God will have Me buried in such a barbarous Imprisonment and obscurity, (which the perfecting some mens designs require) wherein few hearts that love Me, are permitted to exchange a word, or a look with Me; I do require and intreat You as your Father and your KING, that You never suffer your heart to receive the least check against, or disaffection from the true Religion established in the Church of England and many disputes, have concluded it to be the best in the world; not onely in the Community, as Christian, but also in the speciall notion, as reformed; keeping the middle way, between the pomp of superstitious Tyranny, and the meanesse of fantastick Anarchy.

I tell you, I have tried it, and after much searc

Not but that (the draught being excellent as to the main, both for Doctrine and Government, in the Church of England) some lines, as in very good figures, may happily need some sweetning, or polishing; which might here have easily been done by a safe and gentle hand, if some mens precipitancy had not violently demanded such rude alterations, as would have quite destroyed all the beautie and proportions of the whole.

The scandal of the late Troubles, which some may object, and urge to you against the Protestant Religion established in England, is easily answered to them, or your own thoughts in this, That scarce any one who hath been a Beginner, or an active Prosecutour of this late Warre, against the Church, the Laws, and Me, either was, or is a true Lover, Embracer, or Practiser of the Protestant Religion; established in England, which neither gives such rules, nor ever before set such examples.

Tis true, some heretofore had the boldnesse to present threatening Petitions to their Princes and Parliaments, which others of the same Factions

ons (but of worse Spirits) have now put in execution : but let not counterfeit and disorderly zeal abate your value and esteem of true pietie, both of them are to be known by their fruits: the sweetnesse of the Vine and Fig. tree is not to be despised, though the Brambles and Thorns should pretend to bear Figs and Grapes, thereby to rule over the Trees.

Nor would I have you to entertain any averfaction, or dislike of Parliaments ; which in their right constitution with Freedome and Honour, will never injure or diminish your greatnesse, but will rather be as interchangings of love, loyalty, and confidence, between a Prince and his People.

Nor would the events of this black Parliament have been other then such (however much biased by Factions in the Elections) if it had been preserved from the insolencies of popular dictates and tumultuary impressions : The sad effects of which will, no doubt, make all Parliaments after this, more cautious to preserve that Freedome and Honour, which belongs to such Assemblies, (when once they have fully shaken off this yoke of Vulgar encroachment) since the publick interest consists in the mutuall and common good, both of Prince and People.

Nothing can be more happy for all, then in fair, grave, and Honourable wayes to contribute their Counsels in Common, enacting all things by publick consent, without tyrannie or tumults. We must not starve our selves, because some men have surcited of wholesome food.

And if neither I, nor you, be ever restored to Our Rights, but God in his severest justice, will punish my Subjects with continuance in their sin, and suffer them to be deluded with the prosperitie of their wickednesse; I hope God will give Me, and you that grace, which will teach and enable Us to want, as well as to wear a Crown, which is not worth taking up or enjoying upon sordid, dishonourable, and irreligious terms.

Keep you to true principles of pietie, virtue, and honour, you shall never want a Kingdome.

A principall poine of your honour will consist, in your conferring all respect, love, and protection to your Mother, my Wife; who hath many wayes deserved well of Me, and chiefly in this, that (having been a means to blesse Me with so many hopefull Children, all which with their Mother, I recommend to your love and care) She hath been content with incomparable magnanimity and patience, to suffer both for, and with Me, and you.

My prayer to God Almighty is, (whatever becomes of Me, who am, I thank God, wrapt up and fortified in my own Innocencie, and his Grace) that he would be pleased to make You an Anchor, or Harbour rather, to these tossed and weather-beaten Kingdoms; a Repairer by Your wisdom, justice, pietie, and valour, of what the folly and wickednesse of some men have so farre ruined, as to leave nothing entire in Church or State; to the Crown, the Nobilitie, the Clergie, or the Commons; either as to Laws, Liberties, Estates, Order, Honour, Conscience, or Lives.
and

When they have destroyed Me, (for I know not how farre God may permit the malice and cruelty of my Enemies to proceed, and such apprehensions some mens words and actions have already given Me) as I doubt not but my blood will crie aloud for vengeance to heaven; so I beseech God not to poure out his wrath upon the generalitie of the People, who have either deserted Me, or engaged against Me, through the artifice and hypocrisie of their Leaders, whose inward horror will be their first Tormenter, nor will they escape exemplarie judgements.

For those that loved Me, I pray God they may have no misse of Me, when I am gone; so much I wish and hope, that all good Subjects may be satisfied with the blessings of Your presence and virtues.

For those that repent of any defects in their dutie toward Me, as I freely forgive them in the word

word of a Christian KING, so I believe You will find them truly zealous, to repay with interest that loyalty and love to You, which was due to Me.

In summe, what good I intended, do You perform, when God shall give You power: much good I have offered, more I purposed to Church and State, if times had been capable of it.

The deception will soon vanish, and the vizards will fall off apace: This mask of Religion on the face of Rebellion, (for so it now plainly appears, since my Restraint and cruel usage, that they fought not for Me, as was pretended) will not long serve to hide some mens deformities.

Happie times, I hope, attend You, wherein Your Subjects (by their miseries) will have learned, that Religion to their God, and Loyalty to their King, cannot be parted without both their sinne and their infelicities.

I pray God bless You, and establish Your Kingdoms in righteousness, Your Soul in true Religion, and Your honour in the love of God and your People.

And if God will have disloyalty perfected by my destruction, let my memorie ever with my name live in you, as of your Father, that loves you, and once a KING of three flourishing Kingdoms; whom God thought fit to honour, not onely with the Sceptre and Government of them, them, but also with the suffering many indignities, and an untimely death for them; while I studied to preserve the Rights of the Church, the power of the Laws, the honour of my Crown, the privilege of Parliaments, the liberties of my People, and my own Conscience, which, I thank God, is dearer to Me than a thousand Kingdoms.

I know God can, I hope he yet will restore Me to my Rights. I cannot despair either of his mercie, or of my Peoples love and pitie.

At worst, I trust, I shall but go before you to a better Kingdome, which God hath prepared for Me, and Me for it, through my Saviour Jesus Christ, to whose mercies I commend you, and all Mine.

Farewell, till We meet, if not on Earth, yet in Heaven.

Meditations upon Death, after the Votes of Non-Addresses, and HIS MAJESTIES closer imprisonment in Carisbrook-Castle.

AS I have leisure enough, so I have cause more than enough, to meditate upon, and prepare for My Death: For I know, there are but few steps between the Prisons, and Graves of Princes.

It

It is Gods indulgence, which gives Me the space; but Mans crueltie, that gives Me the sad occasions for these thoughts.

For, besides the common burden of mortalitie which lies upon Me, as a Man; I now bear the heavie load of other mens ambitions, fears, jealousies, and cruel passions, whose envie or enmitie against Me, makes their own lives seem deadly to them, while I enjoy any part of Mine.

I thank God, My prosperitie made Me not wholly a Stranger to the contemplations of Mortalitie:

Those are never unseasonable, since this is alwayes uncertain: Death being an eclipse, which oft happeneth as well in clear, as cloudie dayes.

But My now long and sharp adversitie, hath so reconciled in Me those naturall Antipathies, between Lite and Death, which are in all men, that I thank God, the common terrours of it are dispelled; and the speciall horror of it, as to My particular, much allayed: for, although My death at present may justly be represented to Me with all those terrible aggravations, which the policie of cruel and implacable enemies can put upon it; (affairs being drawn to the very dregs of malice) yet I blesse God, I can look upon all those stings, as unpoysonous, though sharp; since My Redeemer hath either pulled them out, or given Me the antidote of his Death against them;
which

which as to the immaturitie, unjustice, shame, scorn, and crueltie of it, exceeded what ever I can fear.

Indeed, I never did find so much the life of Religion, the feast of a good Conscience, and the brazen wall of a judicious integritie and constancie, as since I came to these closer conflicts with the thoughts of Death.

I am not so old, as to be weary of life; nor (I hope) so bad, as to be either afraid to die, or ashamed to live: true, I am so afflicted, as might make Me sometime even desire to die, if I did not consider, that it is the greatest glory of a Christians life to die daily, in conquering by a lively faith, and patient hopes of a better life, those partiall and quotidian deaths, which kill us (as it were) by piece-meals, and make us overlive our own fates, while We are deprived of health, honour, libertie, power, credit, safetie, or estate, and those other comforts of dearest relations, which are as the life of our lives.

Though, as a KING, I think My self to live in nothing temporall so much, as in the love and good will of My people; for which, as I have suffered many deaths, so I hope, I am not in that point as yet wholly dead: notwithstanding, My Enemies have used all the poyson of falsitie, and violence of hostilitie, to destroy, first the love and Loyaltie, which is in My Subjects, and then all that content of life in Me, which from these I chiefly enjoyed.
and

Indeed, they have left Me but little of life, and onely the husk and shell (as it were) which their further malice and crueltie can take from Me; having bereaved Me of all those worldly comforts, for which life it self seems desireable to men.

But, O my Soul! think not that life too long, or tedious, wherein God gives thee any opportunities, if not to do, yet to suffer with such Christian patience, and magnanimity in a good Cause, as are the greatest honour of our lives, and the best improvement of our deaths.

I know, that in point of true Christian valour, it argues pusillanimitie to desire to die out of wearinesse of life; and a want of that heroick greatnesse of spirit, which becomes a Christian in the patient and generous sustaining those afflictions, which as shadows necessarily attend us, while we are in this bodie; and which are lessened or enlarged, as the Sun of our prosperity moves higher, or lower: whose totall absence is best recompensed with the Dew of Heaven.

The assaults of affliction may be terrible, like Samsons Lion, but they yield much sweetnesse to those, that dare to encounter and overcome them; who know how to overlive the witherings of their Gourds without discontent or peevishnesse, vishnesse, while they may yet converse with God.

That I must die as a man, is certain; that I may die a King, by the hands of my own Subjects, a violent, sudden, and barbarous death, in the strength of My years, in the midst of My Kingdoms, My Friends and loving Subjects being helpless Spectatours, My Enemies insolent Revilers and Triumphers over Me, living, dying, and dead, is so probable in humane reason, that God hath taught Me not to hope otherwise, as to mans crueltie; however, I despair not of Gods infinite mercy.

I know My life is the object of the Devils and wicked mens malice, but yet under Gods sole custodie and disposall: Whom I do not think to flatter for longer life, by seeming prepared to die; but I humbly desire to depend upon him, and to submit to his will both in life and death, in what order soever he is pleased to lay them out to Me. I confesse it is not easie for Me to contend with those many horrors of death, where-with God suffers Me to be tempted; which are equally horrid, either in the suddenesse of a barbarous Affasination, or in those greater formalities, whereby My Enemies (being more solemnly cruel) will, it may be seek to adde (as those did, who Crucified Christ) the mockery of Justice, to the crueltie of Malice: That I may be destroyed, as with greater pomp and artifice, so with lesse pitie, it will be but a necessary policie to make My death appear as an act of Justice, done by Subjects upon their Sovereigne; who know that no Law of God or Man, invests them with any power of Judicature without Me, much lesse against Me: and who, being sworn, and bound by all that is sacred before God and man, to endeavour My preservation, must pretend Justice to cover their Perjurie.
with

It is, indeed, a sad fate for any man to have his Enemies to be Accusers, Parties, and Judges; but most desperate, when this is acted by the insolence of Subjects against their Sovereigne; wherein those, who have had the chiefeft hand, and are most guilty of contriving the publick Troubles, must by shedding My bloud, seem to wash their own hands of that innocent bloud, whereof they are now most evidently guilty before God and man; and I believe in their own consciences too, while they carried on unreasonable demands, first by Tumults, after by Armies. Nothing makes mean spirits more cowardly-cruel in managing their usurped power against their lawfull Superiours, then this, the Guilt of their unjust Usurpation; notwithstanding, those specious and popular pretensions of Justice against Delinquents, applied onely to disguise at first the monstrosnesse of their designe, who despaired, indeed, of possessing the power and profits profits of the Vineyard, till the Heir, whose right it is, be cast out and slain.

With them, my greatest fault must be, that I would not either destroy my Self with the Church and State by my Word, or not suffer them to do it unresisted by the Sword; whose covetous ambition no Concessions of mine could ever yet either satisfy or abate.

Nor is it likely they will ever think, that Kingdome of Brambles, which some men seek to erect (at once weak, sharp, and fruitlesse, either to God or man) is like to thrive, till watered with the Royall bloud of those, whose right the Kingdome is.

Well, Gods will be done: I doubt not but my Innocencie will find him both my Protectour, and my Advocate, who is my onely Judge, whom I own as King of Kings, not onely for the eminency of his power and majestie above them; but also for that singular care and protection, which he hath over them; who knows them to be exposed to as many dangers (being the greatest Patrons of Law, Justice, Order, and Religion on earth) as there be either Men or devils, which love confusion.

Nor will he suffer those men long to prosper in their Babel, who build it with the bones, and cement it with the bloud of their Kings.

I am confident they will find Avengers of my R death

death among themselves : the injuries I have sustained from them, shall be first punished by them, who agreed in nothing so much, as in opposing Me.

Their impatience to bear the loud cry of my bloud, shall make them think no way better to expiate it, then by shedding theirs, who with them most thirsted after mine.

The sad confusions following my destruction, are already presaged and confirmed to Me, by those I have lived to see since my troubles; in which God alone (who onely could) hath many wayes pleaded my cause; not suffering them to go unpunished, whose confederacy in sin was their onely security; who have cause to fear, that God will both further divide, and by mutuall vengeance, afterward destroy them.

My greatest conquest of death, is from the power and love of Christ, who hath swallowed up death in the victory of his Resurrection, and the glory of his Ascension.

My next comfort is, that he gives Me not onely the honour to imitate his example in suffering for righteousness sake, (though obscured by the foulest charges of Tyranny and Injustice) but also that charity, which is the noblest revenge upon, and victory over my Destroyers : By which I thank God, I can both forgive them, and pray for them, that God would not impute my bloud to them them further, then to convince them what need they have of Christs bloud to wash their souls from the guilt of shedding mine.

At present, the will of my Enemies seems to be their onely rule, their power the measure, and their successe the Exactour, of what they please to call Justice, while they flatter themselves with the fancie of their own safety by my danger, and the securitie of their lives and designs by my Death: forgetting, that as the greatest temptations to sin are wrapped up in seeming prosperities, so the severest vengeance of God are then most accomplished, when men are suffered to complete their wicked purposes.

I blesse God, I pray not so much that this bitter cup of a violent death may passe from Me, as that of his wrath may passe frō all those, whose hands by deserting Me, are sprinkled, or by acting & consenting to my death, are embrued with my bloud.

The will of God hath confined and concluded mine; I shall have the pleasure of dying, without any pleasure of desired vengeance.

This I think becomes a Christian toward his Enemies, and a King toward his Subjects.

They cannot deprive Me of more then I am content to lose, when God sees fit by their hands to take it from Me; whose mercy I believe, will more then infinitely recompence, what ever by mans injustice he is pleased to deprive Me of.

The glory attending my death will far surpasse all I could enjoy, or conceive in life.

I shall not want the heavie and envied Crowns of this world, when my God hath mercifully crowned and consummated his graces with glory; and exchanged the shadows of my earthly Kingdoms among men, for the substance of that heavenly Kingdome with himself.

For the censures of the world, I know the sharp and necessary Tyrannie of my Destroyers, will sufficiently confute the calumnies of Tyranny against Me. I am perswaded, I am happie in the judicious love of the ablest & best of my Subjects, who do not onely pity and pray for Me, but would be content even to die with Me, or for Me.

These know, how to excuse my failings as a Man, and yet to retain, and pay their duty to Me as their King; there being no religious necessitie binding any Subjects by pretending to punish, infinitely to exceed the faults and errours of their Princes; especially there where more then sufficient satisfaction hath been made to the publick; the enjoyment of which, private ambitions have hitherto frustrated.

Others, I believe, of softer tempers, and lesse advantaged by my ruine, do already feel sharp convictions, and some remorse in their consciences; where they cannot but see the proportions of their evil dealings against Me in the measure of Gods

Gods retaliations upon them, who cannot hope long to enjoy their own thumbs and toes, having under pretence of paring others nails, been so cruell as to cut off their chiefeſt ſtrength.

The puniſhment of the more insolent and obſtinate, may be like that of Korah and his Complices (at once mutining againſt both Prince and Prieſt) in ſuch a method of Divine Juſtice, as is not ordinary; the earth of the loweſt and meaneſt people opening upon them, and ſwallowing them up in a juſt diſdain of their ill-gotten and worſe-used Authority: upon whoſe ſupport and ſtrength they chiefly depended for their building, and eſtabliſhing their deſignes againſt Me, the Church, and State.

My chiefeſt comfort in death conſiſts in my peace, which I truſt, is made with God; before whoſe exact Tribunall I ſhall not fear to appear, as to the Cauſe ſo long diſputed by the Sword, between Me and my cauſeleſſe Enemies: where I doubt not, but his righteous judgement will confute their fallacy, who from worldly ſucceſſe (rather like Sophiſters, then ſound Chriſtians) draw thoſe popular concluſions for Gods approbation of their actions; whoſe wiſe providence (we know) oft permits many events, which his revealed Word (the onely clear, ſafe, and fixed rule of good actions and good conſciences) in no ſort approves.

I am confident, the Justice of my Cause, and cleareness of my Conscience before God, and toward my People, will carrie Me as much above them in Gods decision, as their successes have lifted them above Me in the vulgar opinion: who consider not, that many times those undertakings of men are lifted up to Heaven in the prosperitie and applause of the world, whose rise is from Hell, as to the injuriousnesse and oppression of the designe. The prosperous winds which oft fill the sails of Pirats, do not justifie their piracie and rapine.

I look upon it with infinite more content and quiet of Soul, to have been worsted in my enforced contestation for, and vindication of the Laws of the Land, the freedome and honour of Parliaments, the rights of my Crown, the just libertie of my Subjects, and the true Christian Religion in its Doctrine, Government, and due encouragements, then if I had with the greatest advantages of Success, over-borne them all, as some men have now evidently done, whatever designs they at first pretended.

The prayers and patience of my Friends and loving Subjects will contribute much to the sweetening of this bitter cup, which I doubt not but I shall more cheerfully take, and drink as from Gods hand (if it must be so) then they can give it to Me, whose hands are unjustly and barbarously lifted up against Me. And

And, as to the last event, I may seem to ow more to my Enemies, then my Friends : while those will put a period to the finnes and sorrows attending this miserable life; wherewith these desire I might still contend.

I shall be more then Conquerour through Christ enabling Me, for whom I have hitherto suffered : As he is the Authour of Truth, Order, and Peace; for all which I have been forced to contend against error, faction, and confusion.

If I must suffer a violent death, with my Saviour, it is but mortalitie crowned with Martyrdom : where the debt of death, which I ow for sinne to nature, shall be raised, as a gift of faith and patience offered to God.

Which I humbly beseech him mercifully to accept: and although death be the wages of my own sin, as from God, and the effect of other finnes, as men, both against God and Me; yet as I hope my own finnes are so remitted, that they shall be no ingredients to imbitter the cup of my death; so I desire God to pardon their finnes, who are most guilty of my destruction.

The Trophies of my charitie will be more glorious and durable over them, then their ill-managed victories over Me.

Though their sinne be prosperous, yet they had need to be penitent, that they may be pardoned : both which I pray God they may obtain, that my temporall death unjustly inflicted by them, may not be revenged by Gods just inflicting eternall death upon them: for I look upon the temporall destruction of the greatest King, as far lesse deprecable, then the eternall damnation of the meanest Subject.

Nor do I wish other, then the safe bringing of the ship to shore, when they have cast me overboard; though it be very strange, that Mariners can find no other means to appease the storm themselves have raised, but by drownig their Pilot.

I thank God, my enemies crueltie cannot prevent my preparation; whose malice in this I shall defeat, that they shall not have the satisfaction to have destroyed my Soul with my body: of whose salvation, while some of them have themselves seemed, and taught others to despair, they have onely discovered this, that they do not much desire it.

Whose uncharitable and cruel Restraints, denying Me even the assistance of any of my Chaplains, hath rather enlarged, then any way obstructed my accessse to the Throne of Heaven.

Where Thou dwellest, O King of Kings; who fillest Heaven and Earth, who art the Fountain of Eternal life, in whom is no shadow of death.

Thou, O God, art both the just inflictor of death upon us, and the mercifull Saviour of us in it, and from it.

Yea,

Yea, it is better for us to be dead to our selves, and live in thee, then by living in our selves to be deprived of thee.

O make the many bitter aggravations of my Death as a Man, and a King, the opportunities and advantages of thy speciall graces and comforts in my Soul, as a Christian.

If thou, Lord, wilt be with Me, I shall neither fear, nor feel any evil, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death.

To contend with death is the work of a weak and mortall man: to overcome it, is the grace of thee alone, who art the Almighty and immortall God.

O my Saviour, who knowest what it is to die with Me, as a Man, make Me to know what it is to passe through death to life with thee my God.

Though I die, yet I know, that thou My Redeemer livest for ever: though thou slayest me, yet thou hast encouraged me to trust in thee for eternall life.

O withdraw not thy favour from me, which is better then life.

O be not farre from me, for I know not how near a violent and cruel death is to me.

As thy Omniscience, O God, discovers, so thy Omnipotence can defeat the designs of those, who have, or shall conspire my destruction.

O shew me the goodnesse of thy will, through the wickednesse of theirs.

Thou givest me leave as a man to pray, that this cup may passe from me; but thou hast taught Me as a Christian by the the example of Christ, to adde, not My will, but Thine be done.

Yea

Yea, Lord, let our wills be one, by wholly resolving mine into thine: let not the desire of life in Me be so great, as that of doing or suffering thy will in either life or death.

As I believe, thou hast forgiven all the errours of my life, so I hope thou wilt save me from the errours of my death.

Make me content to leave the worlds nothing, that I may come really to enjoy all in thee, who hast made Christ unto me in life, gain; and in death, advantage.

Though my Destroyers forget their duty to thee and me, yet do not thou, O Lord, forget to be mercifull to them.

For, what profit is there in my bloud, or in their gaining my Kingdoms, if they lose their own Souls?

Such as have not onely resisted my just Power, but wholly usurped and turned it against my Self; though they may deserve, yet let them not receive to themselves damnation.

Thou madest thy Sonne a Saviour to many that crucified him, while at once he suffered violently by them, and yet willingly for them.

O let the voice of his bloud be heard for my Murderers, louder then the cry of mine against them.

Prepare them for thy mercy by due convictions of their sin, and let them not at once deceive and damn their own Souls, by fallacious pretensions of Justice in destroying me, while the conscience of their unjust usurpation of power against me, chiefly tempts them to use all extremities against me.

O Lord, thou knowest, I have found their mercies to me

me as very false, so very cruel; who pretending to preserve me, have meditated nothing but my ruine.

O deal not with them as bloud-thirsty and deceitfull men; but overcome their cruelty with thy compassion and my charity.

And when thou makest inquisition for My bloud, O sprinkle their polluted, yet penitent Souls, with the bloud of thy Son, that thy destroying Angel may passe over them.

Though they think my Kingdoms on earth too little to entertain at once both them and me, yet let the capacious Kingdome of thine infinite mercy at last receive both me and my enemies:

Where being reconciled to thee in the bloud of the same Redeemer, we shall live farre above these ambitious desires, which beget such mortall enmities.

When their hands shall be heaviest, and cruelest upon me, O let me fall into the arms of thy tender and eternall mercies:

That what is cut off of my life in this miserable moment, may be repaied in thy ever blessed eternity.

Lord, let thy Servant depart in peace, for my eyes have seen thy salvation.

Vota dabunt, quæ bella negârunt.

FINIS.

A perfect Copie of private Prayers used by His MAJESTIE, in the time of His Sufferings.

A Prayer in time of Captivity.

Powerfull and Eternall God! to whom nothing is so great, that it may resist; or so small, that it is contemned; look upon My Miserie with thine eye of Mercy, and let Thine infinite power vouchsafe to limit out some proportion of deliverance unto Me, as to Thee shall seem most convenient; let not Injurie, O Lord, triumph over Me; and let My faults by Thy hand be corrected; and make not My unjust enemies the ministers of thy Justice: But yet My God, if in Thy wisdom this be the aptest chastisement for My unexcusable transgressions; if this ungratefull bondage be fittest for My over-high desires; if the pride of my (not enough humble) heart be thus to be broken, O Lord, I yield unto Thy will, and cheerfully embrace what sorrow Thou wilt have Me suffer: Onely thus much let Me crave of Thee, (Let my craving O Lord, be accepted of, since it even proceeds from Thee) that by Thy goodnesse, which is Thy self, Thou wilt suffer some beam of thy Majestie so to shine in My mind, that I, who in My greatest Afflictions acknowledge it My noblest Title to be Thy Creature,
 may

may still depend confidently on Thee. Let Calamitie be the exercise, but not the overthrow of My virtue. O let not their prevailing power be to My destruction. And if it be Thy will that they more and more vex Me with punishment, yet, O Lord, never let their wickednesse have such a hand, but that I may still carry a pure mind, and stedfast resolution ever to serve Thee, without fear or presumption, yet with that humble Confidence which may best please Thee; so that at the last I may come to thy eternall Kingdome, through the Merits of thy Son, our alone Saviour Jesus Christ. Amen.

Another Prayer.

ALmighty and most mercifull Father, look down upon Me thy unworthy servant, who here prostrate My self at the Foot-stool of Thy Throne of Grace; but look upon Me, O Father, through the Mediation, and in the Merits of Jesus Christ, in whom Thou art onely well pleased: for, of My self I am not worthy to stand before Thee, or to speak with My unclean lips to Thee, most holy and eternall God; for as in sinne I was conceived and born, so likewise I have broken all Thy Commandments by My sinfull motions, unclean thoughts, evil words, and wicked works; omitting many duties I ought to do, and committing

committing many vices which thou hast forbidden under pain of thy heavie displeasure : as for my sins, O Lord, they are innumerable ; wherefore I stand here liable to all the miseries in this life , and everlasting Torments in that to come; if Thou shouldst deal with Me according to My deserts. I confesse, O Lord, that it is Thy Mercie, (which endureth for ever,) and Thy compassion (which never fails,) which is the cause that I have not been long ago consumed:but with Thee there is mercie and plenteous Redemption; in the multitude therefore of Thy Mercies, and by the Merits of Jesus Christ, I intreat Thy Divine Majesty, that Thou wouldst not enter into judgement with thy servant , nor be extreme to mark what is done amisse, but be Thou mercifull unto Me , and wash away all My sins with that precious blood that My Saviour shed for Me. And I beseech thee, O Lord, not onely to wash away all My sins , but also to purge My heart by thy holy Spirit, from the drosse of my natural corruption ; and as thou doest adde daies to My life, so good Lord, I beseech Thee, to adde repentance to My daies , that when I have past this mortal life, I may be partaker of Thy everlasting Kingdom, through the Merits of Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

A Prayer and Confession, made in and for the times of Affliction.

ALmighty and most mercifull Father, as it is onely Thy goodnesse that admits of Our imperfect Prayers, and the knowledge that Thy mercies are infinite, which can give Us any hope of Thy accepting or granting them; so it is our bounden and necessary dutie to confesse our sins freely unto Thee; and of all men living, I have most need, most reason so to do; no man having been so much obliged by Thee, no man more grievously offending Thee: that degree of knowledge which Thou hast given Me, adding likewise to the guilt of My transgressions. For was it through ignorance, that I suffered innocent bloud to be shed by a false pretended way of Justice? or that I permitted a wrong way of Thy Worship, to be set up in Scotland? and injured the Bishops in England? O no; but with shame and grief I confesse, that I therein followed the persuasions of worldly wisdom, forsaking the Dictates of a right-informed Conscience; Wherefore, O Lord, I have no excuse to make, no hope left, but in the multitude of Thy mercies; for I know My repentance weak, and My prayers faultie: Grant therefore mercifull Father, to strengthen My repentance, and amend my prayers, that thou mayest clear the way for Thine own

own mercies , to which O let Thy Justice at last give place , putting a speedie end to My deserved afflictions. In the mean time give Me Patience to endure, Constancie against Temptations , and a discerning spirit , to choose what is best for Thy Church, and People , which thou hast committed to My Charge. Grant this , O most mercifull Father for thy Sonne Jesus Christs sake, our only Saviour. Amen.

A Prayer in time of imminent Danger.

O Most mercifull Father , though My sins are so many and grievous, that I may rather expect the effects of Thy anger, then so great a deliverance , as to free Me from My present great danger; yet, O Lord , since Thy mercies are over all thy works , and Thou never failest to relieve all those who with humble and unfeigned repentance come to Thee for succour , it were to multiply, not diminish My transgressions to despair of thy heavenly favour: wherefore I humbly desire thy Divine Majestie, that Thou wilt not only pardon all My sins, but also free Me out of the hands , and protect Me from the malice of My cruel Enemies. But if Thy wrath against My hainous offences will not otherwayes be satisfied, then by suffering Me to fall under My present afflictions , Thy will be done ; yet with humble

S

Impor-

Importunitie, I do, and shall never leave to implore the assistance of Thy heavenly Spirit, that My cause, as I am thy Vicegerent may not suffer through My weaknesse, or want of courage. O Lord, so strengthen and enlighten all the faculties of My mind, that with clearnesse I may shew forth Thy Truth, and manfully endure this bloudie Triall, that so My sufferings here may not onely glorifie Thee, but likewise be a furtherance to My Salvation hereafter. Grant this, O mercifull Father, for his sake who suffered for Me, even Jesus Christ the Righteous. Amen.

FINIS.

A Copie of a Letter which was sent from the Prince to the KING; Dated from the Hague, Jan. 23. 1648.

SIR,

HAVING no means to come to the knowledge of your Majesties present condition, but such as I receive from the Prints, or (which is as uncertain) Report; I have sent this Bearer Seamour to wait upon your Majestie, and to bring me an account of it: that I may withall assure your Majestie, I do not onely pray for your Majestie according to my Dutie, but shall alwayes be ready to do all which shall be in my power, to deserve that blessing which I now humbly beg of your Majestie upon

SIR,

Your Majesties

most humble and most obedient son and servant,

CHARLES.

The Superscription was thus,

For the King.

S 2

A

Hague,
Jan. 23.
1648.

A true Relation of the Kings Speech to the Lady Elisabeth, and the Duke of Glocester, the day before His Death.

HIs Children being come to meet Him, He first gave his blessing to the Lady Elisabeth; and bade her remember to tell her Brother James, when ever she should see him, That it was his Fathers last desire, that he should no more look upon Charles as his eldest Brother onely, but be obedient unto him, as his Sovereigne; and that they should love one another, & forgive their Fathers enemies. Then said the King to her, Sweet-heart you'l forget this: No (said she) I shall not forget it while I live: And pouring forth abundance of Tears, promised Him to write down the Particulars.

Then the King taking the Duke of Glocester upon his Knee, said, Sweet-heart, now they will cut off thy Fathers Head; (Upon which words the Child looked very stedfastly on him.) Mark Child what I say, They will cut off My Head, and perhaps make thee a King: But mark what I say, You must not be a King, so long as your Brothers, Charles & James do live: For they will cut off your Brothers heads (when they can catch them,) and cut off thy head too at the last: and therefore I charge you, do not be made a King by them. At which the Child sighing, said, I will be torn in pieces first. Which falling so unexpectedly from one so young, it made the King rejoyce exceedingly.

Ano-

Another Relation from the Lady Elisabeths own Hand.

WHat the King said to me the 29th of January 1648. being the last time I had the happinesse to see Him. He told me, He was glad I was come, and although He had not time to say much, yet somewhat He had to say to me, which he had not to another, or leave in writing, because He feared their Crueltie was such, as that they would not have permitted Him to write to me. He wished me not to grieve and torment my self for Him; for that would be a glorious death that He should die; it being for the Laws and Liberties of this Land, and for maintaining the true Protestant Religion. He bid me read Bishop Andrews Sermons, Hookers Ecclesiasticall Politie, and Bishop Lauds Book against Fisher, which would ground me against Poperie. He told me, He had forgiven all His Enemies, and hoped God would forgive them also; and commanded Us, and all the rest of my Brothers & Sisters to forgive them: He bid me tell my Mother, That his thoughts had never strayed from Her, and that His Love should be the same to the last. Withall He commanded me and my Brother to be obedient to Her. And bid me send his Blessing to the rest of my Brothers and Sisters, with Commendation to all His Friends: So after He had given me His Blessing, I took my leave.

S 3

Further,

Further, He commanded Us all to forgive those people, but never to trust them; for they had been most false to Him, and to those that gave them power, and He feared also to their own souls; And desired me not to grieve for Him, for He should die a Martyr; And that He doubted not but the Lord would settle His Throne upon his Son, and that We should be all happier, then We could have expected to have been, if He had lived: With many other things, which at present I cannot remember

Elizabeth.

Another Relation from the Lady Elizabeth.

THe KING said to the Duke of Glocester, that He would say nothing to him but what was for the good of his soul: He told Him, that He heard that the Armie intended to make him King; but it was a thing not for him to take upon him, if he regarded the welfare of his Soul; for he had two Brothers before him; and therefore commanded him upon His blessing, never to accept of it, unlesse it redounded lawfully upon him: and commanded him to fear the Lord, and he would provide for him.

Copia vera.

An

An Epitaph upon King
CHARLES.

SO falls that stately Cedar; while it stood
That was the onely glory of the Wood;
Great CHARLES, thou earthly God, celestial Man, Whose life, like others, though it were a span;
Yet in that span was comprehended more
Then Earth hath waters, or the Ocean shore:
Thy heavenly virtues Angels should rehearse,
It is a theam too high for humane Verse:
He that would know thee right, then let him look Upon thy rare incomparable Book,
And read it o're and o're: which if he do,
Hee'l find thee King, and Priest, and Prophet too;
And sadly see our losse, and though in vain,
With fruitlesse wishes call thee back again:
Nor shall oblivion sit upon thy Herse,
Though there were neither Monument, nor Verse.
Thy Suffrings and thy Death let no man name,
It was thy Glory, but the Kingdomes Shame.

J. H.

FINIS.

DA 400

.C 485

1649

c. 1

4656294

18JY13

